Stakes are big in final 3 primaries

By The Associated Press

Presidential candidates made last-minute pitches today in three states for votes in the final primaries of the 30-state marathon leading to the party conventions.

The stakes were big with the primaries Tuesday in California, New Jersey and Ohio producing 540 Democratic delegate votes and 331 on the Republican side.

After fast-paced weekends, Democratic candidates Jimmy Carter, Morris K. Udall and Frank Church stumped in Ohio. California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. was in New Jersey with Carter planning activity there today, too.

President Ford, running for the Republican nomination, was in Ohio today and his opponent, former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, campaigned in his home state.

As the primary circuit, which began in February in New Hampshire, neared a close, Reagan picked up 35 new delegates in weekend state conventions — 15 in Louisiana, 17 in Virginia and 3 in Colorado. Ford picked up one in Virginia.

The changes give Ford 806 delegates and Reagan 690 with 1,130 needed for nomination.

There was little change on the Democratic side with Minnesota giving 16 of its delegates selected Sunday to Sen. Hubert Humphrey and three were chosen uncommitted. Humphrey said last week he may reassess his early stand against active campaigning for the nomination.

Among Democrats, Carter, the former Georgia governor, now has 909 delegates and Udall, the congressman from Arizona, 307.5. There are 393.5 uncommitted delegate votes with 1,505 needed for the nomination.

Ford, in a television appearance Sunday, said he believes he is closing on Reagan in California.

California is a winner-take-all primary and the most recent California Poll shows Reagan the leader for the state's 167 delegates. Ford is favored to take a hefty portion of the 164 total delegates from New Jersey and Ohio.

Five of the Democratic presidential hopefuls appeared on ABC's "Issues and Answers" Sunday, but did little more than restate old positions and make optimistic predictions on Tuesday's primaries.

Udall, Brown and Church, a senator from Idaho, aimed their remarks at what they said is Carter's lack of specifics on the issues. And, each predicted he might emerge as the Democratic candidate should Carter be stopped in his drive for the nomination.

The other Democrat appearing was Alabama Gov. George C. Wallace, whose campaigning has been limited by a lack of money.

In Calfornia, the Republican battle focused on a controversy over television commercials.

The Ford campaign ads charge that Reagan, as president, could be a threat to start a war. Ford said he was standing by the ads and Reagan charged that the commercials represent tactics that could destroy the Republican party.

Reagan, at the Sacramento Press Club on Wednesday, was asked what the United States should do to prevent blodshed in Rhodesia, where a white minority rules a black majority.

Reagan said: "They are fighting those guerillas from across the border, and doing so very well. But whether it would be enough to make simply a show of strength, the promise that we would, or whether you would have to in with occupation forces or not, I don't know that."

On Thursday Reagan stressed his proposals were aimed at achieving an "orderly transition to (black) mjority rule" in that white-ruled nation and that the United States must serve as mediator.

Reagan said Sunday that of the Ford commercials: "I thought the Republicans had learned their lesson. This type of tactic is terribly devisive. It threatened once before to destory our party. This time it might."

A Reagan campaign official said the candidate was referring to the attack launched against Arizona Sen. Barry Goldwater in his bid for the presidency in 1964. He noted Goldwater had been accused of having a potentional to start a nuclear war.

On the Democratic side, Carter sought the Jewish vote in New Jersey and Udall spoke about history in other Sunday campaigning.

In an address to a predominantly Jewish crowd of 500 persons at Elizabeth, N.J., Sunday, Carter said again that he supported Israeli statehood.

5 hurt in crash

A two-car accident at 4:30 p.m. Sunday at the Highway 62 interchange on Interstate 55 involved the above station wagon, driven east by Homer T. Cross, 55, of Charleston Route Two, which struck a northbound car driven by Ernest K. Paulsen, 53, of Maryester, Fla., who was attempting to make a left turn onto the I-55 ramp. Both drivers and three passengers in the Cross car received minor injuries and were taken to Missouri Delta Community Hospital, according to Miner police who investigated the accident. The names of the passengers were not available.

4 hurt in 2-car collision

Four persons were injured in a two- vehicle collision Sunday afternoon at the intersection of East Malone Avenue and Ingram Street.

A westbound car driven by Anthony Taylor of Normal, Ill., was stopped on East Malone waiting to make a left turn when it was struck from behind by a car driven by McArthur Watts of Bloomington, Ill., which was traveling in the same direction.

Two passengers in the Taylor vehicle received injuries and were treated and released at Missouri Delta Community Hospital. Frederika Taylor of Normal was treated for a back strain and Diane Medcalf of Bloomington, Ill., received treatement for a muscle strain.

The hospital also treated two passengers in the Watts vehicle. Jerri Watts of Bloomington was treated for a cut lip and Verla Medcalf of Bloomington was treated for muscle strain.

No arrests were made.

Gideon woman seriously hurt

MALDEN — A young Gideon woman was seriously injured early Sunday in a one- car accident .1 mile east of town on Highway 62.

The accident occurred at 3:30 a.m. when an eastbound car driven by Bonnie Cunningham, 19, of Gideon Route One ran off the right side of the road at a high rate of speed and struck a bridge marker and a utility pole guide wire, then jumped a drainage ditch, struck a dirt embankment and overturned onto its top.

The driver was taken to Dunklin County Memorial Hospital at Kennett and later transferred to Baptist Memorial Hospital in Memphis.

135 missing, 6 dead in flood

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Flood waters continued to roll across southeastern Idaho today, forcing evacuations 50 miles from the site where the Teton Dam burst two days ago.

The official death toll stood at six, with 135 persons missing. Officials said many of the missing may just be out of touch with relatives. A breakdown in telephone communication and road travel hampered efforts to determine the status of the missing.

The names of the dead have not been released.

The farming town of Firth was evacuated during the night. Officials said this morning the town was under water. No injuries were reported in the community of 400 because of the early warning that the slow-moving flood crest was coming.

Merle Tebbs, federal disaster emergency director in Boise, said considerably more damage was expected. The dam burst has already flooded several communities upstream.

Part of Idaho Falls was evacuated after midnight when a bridge, battered by the still-rising waters, began buckling and threatened to break. It held, and oservers said the water level appeared to have dropped several feet by sunrise.

Furniture store burglarized

PORTAGEVILLE — Stafford Furniture & Appliance Co., 126 E. Main St., and H&R Block Income Tax Service were burglarized early Sunday morning, and an unsuccessful attempt was made to break into Quality Shoe & Dress Shop, 217 E. Main St.

Four televisions — two black and white and two color sets — a citizens band base station radio, a mobile CB radio and a glass-topped coffee table were stolen from the furniture store.

Police said the building was entered by prying open an east door and exit was made by unlocking a north back door leading to an alley.

Burglars took to the roof and broke a window to enter the income tax service office, located upstairs over Daisy's, 223 E. Main St. The office was ransacked but nothing was found to be missing in an early investigation.

Pry marks, believed made by a crowbar were found on a back door of the dress shop. However, the burglars did not get into the building.

6 juveniles arrested

CHARLESTON — Six juveniles have been arrested, including three females for destruction of private property and littering Saturday at 2:31 p.m. and three 16-year- old boys suspected of burglary.

Police reported the girls — aged 14, 15 and 16 — had pulled flowers from flower boxes in front of the Enterprise- Courier newspaper office, 206 S. Main St., climbed onto a railing and pulled down a sign at the Buckner- Ragsdale store, 202 S. Main St., and had broken glass in the street and emptied trash from a trash can onto the street.

The boys are being held for investigation of a burglary that occurred sometime between May 29 and June 3 at the Donald Flowers home, 305 Washington St.

The juveniles have been turned over to Juvenile Officer Gordon Galemore.

Vandals smash windshield

Separate incidents of vandalism and attempted break-in were reported to the Sikeston Police Department over the weekend.

Kelly Jackson Jr. of East Prairie, manager of the Tradewinds Cafe, 875 W. Malone Ave., reported an attempted break-in at the Tradewinds sometime between Sunday afternoon and this morning. The door of the establishment was damaged and open when Jackson arrived to open for business this morning, but an inner door was not damaged and Health nutrition survey to be made in Dexter

DEXTER — A team of U.S. Public Health Service personnel will visit Dexter from June through August to conduct a health and nutrition examination survey designed to gather valuable statistical information on the health of the American people. The survey, a program of the National Center for Health Statistics, is part of a continuing national program first authorized by Congress in 1956.

Over a three-year period, 28,000 individuals, ranging from six months through 74 years old, will be asked to participate in the study. Dexter is one of 65 areas scientifically selected to produce a representative sample of the total population of the United States Approximately 585 residents of New Madrid and Stoddard Counties, who fall into a statistically representative sample of the area, will be offered a free physical examination.

On June 7, 1976, interviewers from the Bureau of the Census and Public Health Service will begin to call on persons selected in this area to solicit their participation and arrange an appointment.

Examinations will be given in the survey's mobile Health Examination Center, which will be located at the National Guard Armory playground on Elm Street in Dexter. Transportation to and from the center will be provide to participants at no cost.

In addition, to a general medical examination and laboratory work-up, participants will be tested for heart and lung conditions, hearing, nutrition, diabetes, hypertension, arthritis and kidney disease. The tests will be administered by U.S. Public Health service personnel consisting of physicians, nurses, technicians and nutritionists.

Since the first survey in this program was undertaken 15 years ago, more than 40,000 Americans of all ages have participated voluntarily.

The information obtained through their cooperation has provided national statistics on the extent of conditions such as heart disease, diabetes and arthritis in the United States and on many facets of human growth and development. The information is used in medical research and education as well as in planning national health programs.

Shriners to ride in parade

The SeMo Shrine Horse Patrol will take part in the 34th annual St. Louis Shrine Circus Parade at 8 p.m. today in St. Louis. The parade will travel down Washington Avenue.

Fred Neal, president of the SeMo Shrine Club, announced the names of the members of the 14- member patrol. They are Melvin Dace, Darrell Alcorn, Frank Ferrell, Les Rister, Rich Lewis, Carl Wilkinson and Clint Elledge of Sikeston; Red Thurston of Bernie; Carter Bell of Dexter; Fremont McTigue of East Prairie; Bill Johnson of Bertrand; Laddie Latham of Matthews; Donald Lynn of Benton; and Whitson Henry of New Madrid.

The St. Louis Shrine Circus is reported to be the largest indoor circus in the world. The circus will begin Tuesday and continue through Friday in Busch Stadium. Funds from the circus will be used to support Shrine hospitals.

The SeMo Shrine Horse Patrol was organized in 1955 and has participated in over 100 parades in eight states.

Neal said 110 units will be in the St. Louis parade.

More natural gas available

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — The 13 large industrial natural gas customers of Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. and Associated Natural Gas Co. have been advised that they may use up to 100 per cent of their basic annual entitlement (BAE) during the contract year ending Aug. 31.

Also, power plant customers were advised that they may use up to 50 per cent of their BAE, with a possibility of going to 100 per cent by the middle of July.

Ralph Wafler, gas operations manager for Ark-Mo and Associated, made the announcement to the affected customers in a letter dated June 4.

The increase in the amount of gas available to the industries and power plants was made possible by conservation practiced by all classes of customers, "which saved a considerable amount, and by our fourth consecutive mild winter," according to Wafler.

BAE's for the utilities' priority 2 customers were established after the Federal Power Commission allowed the nation's pipeline suppliers of natural gas to begin curtailing the utilities, Wafler said.

"We have contracts with Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. and Texas Gas Transmission Corp. and Texas Gas Transmission Corp. for 13.4 billion cubic feet of gas, he said, "but this supply year they're only able to supply us with about 8.8 billion cubic feet.

"Therefore, last September -- at the beginning of our supply year -- we informed the priority 2's that they could only use 17 per cent of their BAE until winter weather determined how much gas would be needed for our residential, firm commercial and human needs customers.

"As mild winter weather prevailed, we were able to increase that percentage to 20, 30, 45, 60, 80 and now 100 per cent of their BAE," Wafler said.

"Had we had a normal winter," he said, "based on heating requirements for the last 20 years, we wouldn't be releasing any gas to the large industries. But, the winter has been far from normal. After Feb. 7 we had no below- freezing temperatures."

Reminder to senior citizens

The Southeast Missouri Area Agency on Aging has issued a reminder to senior citizens of Missouri that the property tax and rent credit deadline is June 30.

To obtain tax credit forms or additional information, call telephone number 471-4992 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Collect calls will be accepted from older persons living in south Scott County and the surrounding area.

Patrolman Payne quits

Payne said he was leaving because of "my dislike for the city management form of government and better working conditions with another department."

Payne said he enjoyed working with everyone in the department and harbored no ill-will against anyone.

Old Beatle albums could be worth hundreds of dollars

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — That old $3.95 Beatle album gathering dust in your record collection could be worth hundreds.

Even a 98-cent copy of "Please Please Me" could fetch $140, if the record is in mint condition with the "VJ" logo in black and "Beattles" misspelled on the label, says collecter Tom Meenach.

Memorabilia merchants claim the British rock group is still big business, even though the Beatles haven't performed in public for 10 years.

"It's starting to turn into a full-time thing," said Mitchell McGeary, owner of a company specializing in old Beatle records. "As much stuff as I can get, I can sell. I started TTR (Ticket to Ryde, Ltd.) a year ago and now I can't keep up."

The business has grossed $8,000 since October, he said.

"I get records from 30 countries," said the 23-year-old carpenter. "But sometimes the only way I can get rate stuff like this is to trade for it. Cash won't even talk sometimes.

"Most of the time it's the label or album cover that's worth the money," said McGeary. "The records themselves usually are worth only a few dollars." sells for $500.

Meenach and McGeary displayed their wares over the weekend for the crowd of curious onlookers at the Spokane Opera House who pored over Beatle buttons, posters, a Beatle thermos bottle, Beatle bubble-gum cards and a gold copy of "Yesterday" encased in glass with a plaque commemorating its presentation to Beatle John Lennon.

"It's kind of interesting, the phenomenon," said promoter Chet Actis. "The Beatles have 20 of the top singles in England right now, and Capitol (records) is re-releasing a Beatle LP."

More natural gas available

BLYTHEVILLE, Ark. — The 13 large industrial natural gas customers of Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. and Associated Natural Gas Co. have been advised that they may use up to 100 per cent of their basic annual entitlement (BAE) during the contract year ending Aug. 31.

Also, power plant customers were advised that they may use up to 50 per cent of their BAE, with a possibility of going to 100 per cent by the middle of July.

Ralph Wafler, gas operations manager for Ark-Mo and Associated, made the announcement to the affected customers in a letter dated June 4.

The increase in the amount of gas available to the industries and power plants was made possible by conservation practiced by all classes of customers, ''which saved a considerable amount, and by our fourth consecutive mild winter,'' according to Wafler.

BAE's for the utilities' priority 2 customers were established after the Federal Power Commission allowed the nation's pipeline suppliers of natural gas to begin curtailing the utilities, Wafler said.

''We have contracts with Texas Eastern Transmission Corp. and Texas Gas Transmission Corp. and Texas Gas Transmission Corp. for 13.4 billion cubic feet of gas, he said, ''but this supply year they're only able to supply us with about 8.8 billion cubic feet.

''Therefore, last September -- at the beginning of our supply year -- we informed the priority 2's that they could only use 17 per cent of their BAE until winter weather determined how much gas would be needed for our residential, firm commercial and human needs customers.

''As mild winter weather prevailed, we were able to increase that percentage to 20, 30, 45, 60, 80 and now 100 per cent of their BAE,'' Wafler said.

''Had we had a normal winter,'' he said, ''based on heating requirements for the last 20 years, we wouldn't be releasing any gas to the large industries. But, the winter has been far from normal. After Feb. 7 we had no below- freezing temperatures.''

Reminder to senior citizens

The Southeast Missouri Area Agency on Aging has issued a reminder to senior citizens of Missouri that the property tax and rent credit deadline is June 30.

To obtain tax credit forms or additional information, call telephone number 471-4992 between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. Collect calls will be accepted from older persons living in south Scott County and the surrounding area.

Patrolman Payne quits

Payne said he was leaving because of ''my dislike for the city management form of government and better working conditions with another department.''

Payne said he enjoyed working with everyone in the department and harbored no ill-will against anyone.

New construction totals $516,489

Sikeston issued building permits for $516,489 in new construction during May, according to City Clerk Lynn Lancaster.

The largest permit issued was for a $60,000 addition to The Daily Standard to house commercial printing operations. The building is being built by Boyer Construction Co.

Other permits included:

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — That old $3.95 Beatle album gathering dust in your record collection could be worth hundreds.

Even a 98-cent copy of ''Please Please Me'' could fetch $140, if the record is in mint condition with the ''VJ'' logo in black and ''Beattles'' misspelled on the label, says collecter Tom Meenach.

Memorabilia merchants claim the British rock group is still big business, even though the Beatles haven't performed in public for 10 years.

''It's starting to turn into a full-time thing,'' said Mitchell McGeary, owner of a company specializing in old Beatle records. ''As much stuff as I can get, I can sell. I started TTR (Ticket to Ryde, Ltd.) a year ago and now I can't keep up.''

The business has grossed $8,000 since October, he said.

''I get records from 30 countries,'' said the 23-year-old carpenter. ''But sometimes the only way I can get rate stuff like this is to trade for it. Cash won't even talk sometimes.

''Most of the time it's the label or album cover that's worth the money,'' said McGeary. ''The records themselves usually are worth only a few dollars.'' sells for $500.

Meenach and McGeary displayed their wares over the weekend for the crowd of curious onlookers at the Spokane Opera House who pored over Beatle buttons, posters, a Beatle thermos bottle, Beatle bubble-gum cards and a gold copy of ''Yesterday'' encased in glass with a plaque commemorating its presentation to Beatle John Lennon.

''It's kind of interesting, the phenomenon,'' said promoter Chet Actis. ''The Beatles have 20 of the top singles in England right now, and Capitol (records) is re-releasing a Beatle LP.''

Saturday the editor enjoyed a very fine visit with Mrs. Mamie Johnson, who was his secretary for years under the WPA. She had a beautiful friend with her, Mrs. Inez Messing of St. Louis, who brought me a notice from Father Woods, who was pastor of St. Francis Xavier, about Father Woods' sister dying. I will give you what information I have. She was here when Father Woods was pastor, as his housekeeper. She was buried Friday, May 28. Funeral at St. Thomas Aquin Church. Interment Calvary Cemetery. I was delighted to see Mamie and Mrs. Inez, although Mamie didn't stay long and visit, since she had to go all over the office, and of course, there wasn't anybody here except Mrs. Coomer. WHERE YOUR TAXES GO

Tax payers have long suspected it, but it took a team of economists at Ford Motor Company to come up with the proof: There are, according to a report in Newsweek, more people being supported with tax dollars than there are workers in the private sector to support them. Adding up government employees, the military on active duty, the disabled and unemployed, the retired and those on welfare, the Ford economists found 80,655,000 tax dependents vs. 71,650,000 nongovernment workers.

GUIDANCE FOR WHAT

By Howard Flieger

This is the season of the year men and women of all faiths — and even those of no avowed faith — sometimes find their thoughts turning to the mystery of external forces that may influence their lives.

When that moment comes, the presidential campaign pales. Arguments over foreign policy, the cost of living, equal opportunity, defense spending, seem insignificant. The rigamarole of day-to-day events loses its meaning in emptiness.

These thoughts are brought to mind by some observations on prayer that were put down on paper nearly 35 years ago by the founder of this magazine, David Lawrence.

At that time, the country was stunned by the trauma of Pearl Harbor — the Japanese attack in the Pacific that catapulted the nation into World War II.

Pearl Harbor was bombed, battered and strafed on a Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941. On the following January 1, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked all Americans to devote the New Year's holiday to prayer for Divine guidance.

"What manner of prayer shall we offer now? It is natural to pray for victory. But victory over whom and over what? Shall we merely ask that the power of Almighty God be visited on those who attack us so that we may emerge triumphant? Is victory over those who struggle to destroy us all that we pray for?"

The idea of a nation at prayer appealed to David Lawrence, but he had no patience with the thought of beseeching the support of an awesome Power for selfish gain. His response to the President's plea went far deeper into human nature than retribution for Pearl Harbor. He wrote:

"We pray to Almighty God for help. Maybe the first help we can expect will come when we begin to help ourselves — when we start to subdue the maelstrom of human currents and crosscurrents that drive millions of us into conflict every day, not necessarily in the wars of organized murder but in the battles of everyday life.

"Maybe help will come when we begin to purge ourselves of the sins of aggression that have made us either deaf or indifferent to the pleas of others. Maybe men in positions of high office have been arrogant. Maybe we of the majority have been intolerant of the minority. Maybe we have planted ourselves too firmly on top of our possessions and bade ourselves never to let others touch what we selfishly refuse to share with them.

"Prayer is not just to receive help so that we can become victorious over others. Prayer is needed to make us victorious first over ourselves...

"We need a new faith in the oldest of human philosophies — we need a spiritual renaissance in the world. Man has fashioned weapons and instruments that defy almost all the elements. Man has turned from the source of constructive skill to the science of destructive force. Let us pray to Almighty God to raise us from this level of material conflict to something different — something higher, something more purposeful.

"Let us pray for a strengthening of our sense of reason. We must contrive to reach the hearts of our fellowmen, irrespective of race, creed or color."

Those were the thoughts in quiet contemplation evoked by a national call for prayer as Americans stepped into the unknown future of World War II nearly 35 years ago.

The words may have seemed too benevolent to readers at the time — shocked as they were by the "day of infany" at Pearl Harbor.

But the words were appropriate then. They are just as appropriate today. It will do us no harm to ask ourselves, as David Lawrence did, what manner of help we seek in prayer.

"No. My position is unchanged."

PREMISES NEMESIS

By RAY CROW

How odd that epicure, the moth:
On wholesome meals from fur and cloth,
He gluts himself when he is larval—
And how he does it is a marvel.
For thought we carefully may pack
Our clothes to thwart his bold attack,
The things we've hidden innermost
Are what he has for dinner most.
Then, metamorphosed off his binge,
He flies, as conscience gives a twinge,
To candles where he makes amends
By getting burnt at both his ends!

SEVERE SECURITY RESTRICTIONS ON FBI

The most obvious fact about the new guidelines for FBI domestic security investigations is that they are being carefully studied by Communist, terrorist and other subversive groups to see how they can best avoid or frustrate future FBI surveillance.

The same holds true of the National Lawyers Guild (NLG), the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, the Center for Constitutional Rights and other organizations composed of Communist and radical attorneys established to protect and defend even those who hate the United States and its form of government so much that they will do anything to destroy it.

The next most obvious fact about the guidelines is that all these elements will find comfort in them---because they impose on the FBI the severest investigative restrictions it has ever had to cope with.

"Less Security for Americans, More Protection for Subversives," would be a fitting title for the guidelines.

The basic reason for this is found in Atty. Gen. Edward Levi's testimony before a House Judiciary subcommittee that the new guidelines (which went into effect April 5) "tie domestic security investigations closely to the violation of federal law...the main thing in my opinion is that the purpose of the investigation must be the detection of unlawful conduct and not merely the monitoring of disfavored or troublesome activities and surely not of unpopular views."

The statement, first of all, is a typically ultraliberal distortion of reality--a whitewash of the truly threatening activities (terrorism, foreign-directed communism, etc.) that have traditionally been the major subject of FBI investigations.

More important, it is a flat repudiation of the fact, repeatedly upheld by the courts, that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has a vital intelligence function in the domestic security field and that legitimate intelligence information is vastly different from criminal evidence.

KGB INFILTRATION
THE COVER-UP
UNRAVELS

Last October, Accuracy in Media took the major news media to task for failing to investigate and report on charges made by Sen. Barry Goldwater that the Soviet KGB had infiltrated the staffs of U.S. senators. Goldwater stated on a Washington TV program that this information had been given him by Vice President Rockefeller. He said that the vice president had told him that information would be included in his report on intelligence activities. Goldwater said that the Rockefeller Report failed to make any mention of these charges and that the Vice President had explained to him that he had been asked to leave them out.

The October AIM Report noted that for some strange reason the major news media had completely ignored the story. It involved allegations of a serious threat to our national security and of a cover-up by the Administration.

Some fifty members of the House of Representatives signed a letter to Sen. Frank Church asking that his committee on intelligence investigate these charges. Sen. Church responded by having a couple of aides talk to FBI officials about the matter. Later, he released a letter he had received from FBI Director Clarence Kelley, which said that the FBI "has no evidence at this time of any infiltration of Congressional staff." The letter did not point out that the assistant director of the FBI W. Ray Wannall had told a seminar on intelligence and internal security sponsored by the American Conservative Union a few weeks earlier that the Soviet intelligence services were showing an increased pattern of activity on Capitol Hill and elsewhere. He told the seminar that the Soviets were trying to develop "agents of influence" and that the U.S. was their prime target.

What is worse, the letter did not reveal that the FBI did have evidence of past infiltration of Capitol Hill offices of the type that Sen. Goldwater was talking about. This information was provided to Sen. Church in a confidential attachment to Mr. Kelley's letter. Sen. Church, who has shown no hesitancy about revealing many CIA secrets, kept this information about KGB operations in Congress secret. The result was that the major media argued that they were justified in having ignored Sen. Goldwater's charges.

On March 11 the issue exploded again when the Associated Press issued a story revealing that in 1967-68, the KGB had recruited as an agent a top aide of Sen. James Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and also chairman of the Internal Security Committee. The following day the aide was identified in the press as Kenneth R. Tolliver, who worked in Eastland's office as legislative and press aide from May 1966 to May 1968.

There is no reason to think that the Tolliver case is the only one that ever occurred involving Capitol Hill espionage. Time magazine in its March 22 issue described another--that of James Kappus, who was recruited by the KGB when he worked for Congressman Alvin O'Konski, a former member of the House Armed Services Committee. Time also stated that the Soviets have a staff of at least 15 of their own people working Capitol Hill, "trying to sell Congressmen and Senators the Soviet position on strategic matters."

Congressman Larry McDonald, a Georgia Democrat, called on Sen. Church and his committee to investigate the Soviet operations on Captol Hill and "cease its onesided hatchet job against the CIA and FBI." McDonald said that anyone who thought that the Tolliver case in Sen. Eastland's office was the sum total of the problem "was naive." He said the American people deserved to know how many of the Congressional staffs have this problem. He recalled that Sen. Church has said that he was interested in investigating KGB operations in this country, but it appeared that Church was actually condoning the "cover-up of danger to the security of the nation."

The major news media seems to have ignored McDonald's call for action, saying that an investigation was long overdue. We suggest that our readers bring this to the attention of their representatives in the House and Senate about Soviet infiltration on Capitol Hill.

HEART OF AMERICA

Everything from toothbrushes to automobiles, farm equipment and that all-important item, energy must be produced by facilities provided by investors in American enterprises. And the stock exchanges are the marketplaces through which funds are funneled for each of these purposes. The stock market is the heart of the American economic system.

At present, because of years of hostile public policy, punitive taxation and regulation, investors and the "money market" are in a weakened financial condition. This condition exists amid forecasts that American corporations will need $2 trillion in new capital, including perhaps as much as $300 billion from new stock issues. If the U.S. is to continue living in the manner to which it has become accustomed and if even a portion of the high-sounding environmental, social and economic goals advocated by planners and government officials are to be realized, the capital MUST be forthcoming. Many proposals are in the works to encourage saving and investment and to stimulate a greater flow of capital to industries through the securities markets. None is more important than those having to do with taxes.

Mr. Henry H. Fowler, former Secretary of the Treasury under President Johnson, calls for a change in the capital gains tax--the tax on profits from the sale of investments. He says, "The incentives offered individual investors to risk capital under the existing tax structure have become insufficient to attract equity investment." The result has been a diminishing participation by individual Americans in the stock market--the source of much of the money for the realization of tomorrow's national dreams. Make no mistake: the health of the stock market is crucial to the health of the nation itself.

KEY TO TRADE BALANCE

If the United States is going to get moving again, simplistic political solutions to complex and very real economic problems must give way to a determination to act constructively in response to real facts.

The U.S. is the world's largest exporter, selling over $71 billion worth of products overseas in 1973. This export trade accounted for around 6.5 million jobs in the U.S., contributed in a major way to industrial growth and prosperity and produced tax revenues for the support of local, state and federal government. Unfortunately, it is not widely understood that U.S. multinational companies, having some $94 billion of investment in plants and manufacturing facilities overseas, are major generators of this flow of trade as well as of jobs and prosperity at home. For example, U.S. companies operating aborad have been accused of exporting jobs. This is simply not true. Speaking of this point, Mr. Willard F. Rockwell, Jr., chairman of the board of one of the nation's major aerospace and manufacturing companies, with plants in many nations of the world, has said, "...when an American company sets up a new operation in a foreign country, it is not exporting jobs, it's actually creating new jobs in America....American...companies with the highest rate of foreign investment increased their net employment in the U.S. about three times faster than those firms with the lowest rates." The reason is simply that U.S. companies with branches overseas increased their sales of goods from the United States through their overseas plants in countries where they might otherwise not have been able to compete at all because of trade barriers designed to shut out foreign products. U.S. multinational companies, over a 12-year period, increased their nonagricultural export sales over three times as fast as those companies based entirely within the U.S.

If America is to buy the things it must have, including petroleum supplies, from other nations, it must in return increase its ability to sell things to them. U.S.-based multinational corporations have become a key element in furthering that ability.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Cutbacks, Red Tape
Endanger Lives of Millions of Workers
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— Millions of American workers are exposed to deadly, poisonous substances on the job. Yet the effort to save their health, perhaps even their lives, has been seriously hampered by cutbacks and red tape.

The best estimate is that one out of every three workers in this country will come down with occupational diseases. Toxic substances, according to another estimate, causes 100,000 job-related deaths each year.

Yet even this disturbing death figure is now considered far too low. Labor Dept. experts have just learned that most of the nation's doctors are unable to diagnose occupational diseases. This means that most deaths from occupational diseases go unreported.

The Labor experts have also discovered that occupational injuries account for an alarming 96 per cent of all reported illnesses at nonagricultural places of work. Yet, industrial plants provide few health services and almost no environmental monitoring.

The Labor Dept. has appealed to Congress for more help to cope with the problem. Of 2,000 industrial hygienists in the United States, only 135 work for the department. Training programs have also been cut back.

As one Labor official told our associate Marc Smolonsky: "There is an appalling lack of manpower." Meanwhile, the problem steadily gets worse, not better, as thousands of new chemicals are developed each year in factories across the country.

The department has tried to set standards for these toxic chemicals as they appear. But President Ford, whose main emphasis is upon cutting costs, requires an inflationary impact statement before new standards can be put into effect. This has slowed the regulatory effort.

Nevertheless, a small, unsung staff is fighting a heroic battle to safeguard workers from occupational disease and death. Hundreds of thousands will die, however, because the problem has been given a low priority.

The darling of the banking lobby, for example, is Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley, D.-Ohio. Whatever the bankers want from Congress, the bankers usually get. And Ashley helps them get it.

His service for the nation's financial institutions, coincidentally, helps to boost his own net worth. For he owns stocks and bonds in American Financial Corp., a blue-chip institution that owns, among other things, Cincinnati's Provident Bank where Ashley has a loan.

Banks are regulated by federal agencies which, in turn, are overseen by Congress. This is delegated to the Banking and Currency committees of the Senate and House, which also handle banking and housing legislation.

Ashley is the third man on the totem pole at the House Banking Committee. From his No. 3 perch, he exercises maximum influence with minimum visibility.

The late chairman, Wright Patman, D.-Texas, distrusted bankers instinctively. But invariably, Ashley would rally a majority of the members who routinely would overrule Patman and would vote more benefits for banks.

Once Ashley called a rump session to approve a banking bill that Patman had tried to block. While Patman was away, Ashely summoned the probanking members behind closed committee doors. For secrecy's sake, they worked without lights.

Ashley has always found the bankers most appreciative. At election time, they have often showered Ashley with more campaign money than he really needs. For he usually runs a low-key campaign, which costs comparative little.

Once, the Ohio Bankers Assn. wrote to bank presidents across the state, urging them to support the congressman "in every possible way."

During his last campaign, Ashley spent barely $23,000 on his election race. of this, banking associations, financial groups and bank executives contributed over $5,000.

After he was re-elected again, Ashley collected another $3,250 in honorariums last year for speeches to the Mortgage Bankers, American Bankers Assn., Ohio Citizens Trust Co., Ohio Savings and Loan Assn. and the New York Savings Banks Assn.

Ashley congenially pooh-poohed any suggestion of impropriety in his relationships with financial institutions. His holdings in American Financial Corp., he said, don't amount to much. He speaks to financial groups, he explained, to tell them about financial legislation.

"I don't have any problem with conflict of interest," he said emphatically. "Absolutely none. I can look anybody straight in the eye and say that."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Most Intense Probes:
Teamsters hit by toughest investigations in 'Brotherhood's' turbulent history

WASHINGTON— Only the Loch Ness monster is targeted for investigation as intense as is the 2.3-million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters with its $121 million central treasury, eight-billion-dollar pension funds and seven-plane air fleet. Its unperturbed leaders now are in Las Vegas's Jockey Club preparing for their quinquennial convention.

And reports from deep inside federal law networks are that there is far greater hope of discovering the Scottish monster in his watery lair than of finding Jimmy Hoffa in what is believed to be a watery grave. Few authorities now link the almost year-long disappearance of the erstwhile teamsters bantam boss with national teamsters politics.

But this hasn't made the Brotherhood any less an attractive target for hundreds of federal and congressional probers.

Out of these probes will spring new national political personalities -- as they did almost 20 years ago when the ancient "McClellan racket busting committee," officially known as the Senate Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field, startled the pubic daily. Probing Hoffa and company the were the late Jack Kennedy; its chief counsel Bobby Kennedy; the ever-current headliner Frank Church; the wily old North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin, and Sen. Barry Goldsater.

Today a Senate subcommittee almost similar to the old McClellan operation is headed by a lesser-known Georgia farmer, the 37-year-old Sen. Sam Nunn. Unknown, but not for long after this committee digs into alleged connections of the underworld with labor. Mind you, the message is that Nunn's group, the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the Committee on Government Operations, now organizing its cadres for a probe in depth similar to the McClellan inquiries of the late '50s, will go beyond the teamsters.

So this nation apparently is due for another investigative spectacular after the new Congress organizes in January 1977.

Nunn is gung ho and eager to go as is his fellow Georgian farmer now maneuvering for higher stakes. But the investigatory competition is tough. The Labor Department has several special units quietly digging into the $1.4 billion Chicago based Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest pension fund. This is on a civil basis. Other units are looking into perhaps as much as another $6 billion in scattered treamster pension funds.

The Chicago dig will take at least another year. Objective is the search for possible violation of "effective fiduciary responsibility." Since Jan. 1, 1975, this phase has given the Labor Department tough weapons in probing any pension fund, its loans and the so-called finders fee crowd.

There are a gaggle of consultants who from time to time have received as much as $190,000 from locals for advice. There are all sorts of special fees to consulting companies in the Midwest.

This big Chicago pension fund, it has been learned, basically paid benefits out of income. Thus the $1.4 billion was investment money. "Play money," one top Labor Department official says. The "'corpus' wasn't touched." Some 70 per cent of it is in real estate. This is extraordinarily high.

This entire vast fund could be put in trusteeship eventually. Or if it is shown there were risky loans, the government could ask the trustees for restitution on the losses, if any.

On the criminal side, if any, there is the Department of Justice. It has a special team and reports to a special unit. The Labor and Justice Departments consult each other, clear with the other's findings so they don't crisscross and ruin each other's evidence.

Though "Labor's" accountants will take at least another year, no one now knows if there are any criminal violations. Some may crop up in the new Nunn committee researches -- and public hearings. Or in the careful look-see of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee headed by New Jersey's Sen. Harrison "Pete" Williams. Or perhaps Miochigan's Sen. Robert Griffin may yet crash through with the launching of a select committee, such as that which was manned by Kennedy, Goldwater and Ervin, et al.

All this has been underway for almost a year on one front or another. The actual hacking away at the big Chicago fund records began on Feb. 1, 1976. And the Professional Drivers Counci, Inc. (PROD) burst in the other day with a new dimension.

"Following the convention, PROD and our members and supporter s in all corners of the country will start a massive program to dig into the Union's books at the local and regional levels," says PROD's executive director and lawyer Arthur Fox.

This is a coordinated drive which can shake the massive national IBT and many of its 800 locals. Much will depend on what springs from the trial of New Jerssy's tough "Tony Pro," Anthony Provenzano, leader of the notorious local 560. It is scheduled for June 22. It could be a springboard.

But it might not. After all, the 400,000 over-the-road freight hauling rank and file voted four to one to ratify the bulging contract General President Frank Fitzsimmons delivered last April. And what counts are the bacon and the bread. But it will be a long battle, which could in five years switch control of the teamsters into new hands--and realign America's industrial power in and out of the labor movement.

Saturday the editor enjoyed a very fine visit with Mrs. Mamie Johnson, who was his secretary for years under the WPA. She had a beautiful friend with her, Mrs. Inez Messing of St. Louis, who brought me a notice from Father Woods, who was pastor of St. Francis Xavier, about Father Woods' sister dying. I will give you what information I have. She was here when Father Woods was pastor, as his housekeeper. She was buried Friday, May 28. Funeral at St. Thomas Aquin Church. Interment Calvary Cemetery. I was delighted to see Mamie and Mrs. Inez, although Mamie didn't stay long and visit, since she had to go all over the office, and of course, there wasn't anybody here except Mrs. Coomer. They can come back anytime they want to.

WHERE YOUR TAXES GO

Tax payers have long suspected it, but it took a team of economists at Ford Motor Company to come up with the proof: There are, according to a report in Newsweek, more people being supported with tax dollars than there are workers in the private sector to support them. Adding up government employees, the military on active duty, the disabled and unemployed, the retired and those on welfare, the Ford economists found 80,655,000 tax dependents vs. 71,650,000 nongovernment workers.

GUIDANCE FOR WHAT

By Howard Flieger

This is the season of the year men and women of all faiths — and even those of no avowed faith — sometimes find their thoughts turning to the mystery of external forces that may influence their lives.

When that moment comes, the presidential campaign pales. Arguments over foreign policy, the cost of living, equal opportunity, defense spending, seem insignificant. The rigamarole of day-to-day events loses its meaning in emptiness.

These thoughts are brought to mind by some observations on prayer that were put down on paper nearly 35 years ago by the founder of this magazine, David Lawrence.

At that time, the country was stunned by the trauma of Pearl Harbor — the Japanese attack in the Pacific that catapulted the nation into World War II.

Pearl Harbor was bombed, battered and strafed on a Sunday morning, Dec. 7, 1941. On the following January 1, President Franklin D. Roosevelt asked all Americans to devote the New Year's holiday to prayer for Divine guidance.

"What manner of prayer shall we offer now? It is natural to pray for victory. But victory over whom and over what? Shall we merely ask that the power of Almighty God be visited on those who attack us so that we may emerge triumphant? Is victory over those who struggle to destroy us all that we pray for?"

The idea of a nation at prayer appealed to David Lawrence, but he had no patience with the thought of beseeching the support of an awesome Power for selfish gain. His response to the President's plea went far deeper into human nature than retribution for Pearl Harbor. He wrote:

"We pray to Almighty God for help. Maybe the first help we can expect will come when we begin to help ourselves — when we start to subdue the maelstrom of human currents and crosscurrents that drive millions of us into conflict every day, not necessarily in the wars of organized murder but in the battles of everyday life.

"Maybe help will come when we begin to purge ourselves of the sins of aggression that have made us either deaf or indifferent to the pleas of others. Maybe men in positions of high office have been arrogant. Maybe we of the majority have been intolerant of the minority. Maybe we have planted ourselves too firmly on top of our possessions and bade ourselves never to let others touch what we selfishly refuse to share with them.

"Prayer is not just to receive help so that we can become victorious over others. Prayer is needed to make us victorious first over ourselves...

"We need a new faith in the oldest of human philosophies — we need a spiritual renaissance in the world. Man has fashioned weapons and instruments that defy almost all the elements. Man has turned from the source of constructive skill to the science of destructive force. Let us pray to Almighty God to raise us from this level of material conflict to something different — something higher, something more purposeful.

"Let us pray for a strengthening of our sense of reason. We must contrive to reach the hearts of our fellowmen, irrespective of race, creed or color."

Those were the thoughts in quiet contemplation evoked by a national call for prayer as Americans stepped into the unknown future of World War II nearly 35 years ago.

The words may have seemed too benevolent to readers at the time — shocked as they were by the "day of infany" at Pearl Harbor.

But the words were appropriate then. They are just as appropriate today. It will do us no harm to ask ourselves, as David Lawrence did, what manner of help we seek in prayer.

"No. My position is unchanged."

PREMISES NEMESIS
By RAY CROW

How odd that epicure, the moth:
On wholesome meals from fur and cloth,
He gluts himself when he is larval—
And how he does it is a marvel.
For thought we carefully may pack
Our clothes to thwart his bold attack,
The things we've hidden innermost
Are what he has for dinner most.
Then, metamorphosed off his binge,
He flies, as conscience gives a twinge,
To candles where he makes amends
By getting burnt at both his ends!

SEVERE SECURITY RESTRICTIONS ON FBI

The most obvious fact about the new guidelines for FBI domestic security investigations is that they are being carefully studied by Communist, terrorist and other subversive groups to see how they can best avoid or frustrate future FBI surveillance.

The same holds true of the National Lawyers Guild (NLG), the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee, the Center for Constitutional Rights and other organizations composed of Communist and radical attorneys established to protect and defend even those who hate the United States and its form of government so much that they will do anything to destroy it.

The next most obvious fact about the guidelines is that all these elements will find comfort in them--because they impose on the FBI the severest investigative restrictions it has ever had to cope with.

"Less Security for Americans, More Protection for Subversives," would be a fitting title for the guidelines.

The basic reason for this is found in Atty. Gen. Edward Levi's testimony before a House Judiciary subcommittee that the new guidelines (which went into effect April 5) "tie domestic security investigations closely to the violation of federal law...the main thing in my opinion is that the purpose of the investigation must be the detection of unlawful conduct and not merely the monitoring of disfavored or troublesome activities and surely not of unpopular views."

The statement, first of all, is a typically ultraliberal distortion of reality--a whitewash of the truly threatening activities (terrorism, foreign-directed communism, etc.) that have traditionally been the major subject of FBI investigations.

More important, it is a flat repudiation of the fact, repeatedly upheld by the courts, that the Federal Bureau of Investigation has a vital intelligence function in the domestic security field and that legitimate intelligence information is vastly different from criminal evidence.

KGB INFILTRATION THE COVER-UP UNRAVELS

Last October, Accuracy in Media took the major news media to task for failing to investigate and report on charges made by Sen. Barry Goldwater that the Soviet KGB had infiltrated the staffs of U.S. senators. Goldwater stated on a Washington TV program that this information had been given him by Vice President Rockefeller. He said that the vice president had told him that information would be included in his report on intelligence activities. Goldwater said that the Rockefeller Report failed to make any mention of these charges and that the Vice President had explained to him that he had been asked to leave them out.

The October AIM Report noted that for some strange reason the major news media had completely ignored the story. It involved allegations of a serious threat to our national security and of a cover-up by the Administration.

Some fifty members of the House of Representatives signed a letter to Sen. Frank Church asking that his committee on intelligence investigate these charges. Sen. Church responded by having a couple of aides talk to FBI officials about the matter. Later, he released a letter he had received from FBI Director Clarence Kelley, which said that the FBI "has no evidence at this time of any infiltration of Congressional staff." The letter did not point out that the assistant director of the FBI W. Ray Wannall had told a seminar on intelligence and internal security sponsored by the American Conservative Union a few weeks earlier that the Soviet intelligence services were showing an increased pattern of activity on Capitol Hill and elsewhere. He told the seminar that the Soviets were trying to develop "agents of influence" and that the U.S. was their prime target.

What is worse, the letter did not reveal that the FBI did have evidence of past infiltration of Capitol Hill offices of the type that Sen. Goldwater was talking about. This information was provided to Sen. Church in a confidential attachment to Mr. Kelley's letter. Sen. Church, who has shown no hesitancy about revealing many CIA secrets, kept this information about KGB operations in Congress secret. The result was that the major media argued that they were justified in having ignored Sen. Goldwater's charges.

On March 11 the issue exploded again when the Associated Press issued a story revealing that in 1967-68, the KGB had recruited as an agent a top aide of Sen. James Eastland, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee and also chairman of the Internal Security Committee. The following day the aide was identified in the press as Kenneth R. Tolliver, who worked in Eastland's office as legislative and press aide from May 1966 to May 1968.

There is no reason to think that the Tolliver case is the only one that ever occurred involving Capitol Hill espionage. Time magazine in its March 22 issue described another--that of James Kappus, who was recruited by the KGB when he worked for Congressman Alvin O'Konski, a former member of the House Armed Services Committee. Time also stated that the Soviets have a staff of at least 15 of their own people working Capitol Hill, "trying to sell Congressmen and Senators the Soviet position on strategic matters."

Congressman Larry McDonald, a Georgia Democrat, called on Sen. Church and his committee to investigate the Soviet operations on Captol Hill and "cease its onesided hatchet job against the CIA and FBI." McDonald said that anyone who thought that the Tolliver case in Sen. Eastland's office was the sum total of the problem "was naive." He said the American people deserved to know how many of the Congressional staffs have this problem. He recalled that Sen. Church has said that he was interested in investigating KGB operations in this country, but it appeared that Church was actually condoning the "cover-up of danger to the security of the nation."

The major news media seems to have ignored McDonald's call for action, saying that an investigation was long overdue. We suggest that our readers bring this to the attention of their representatives in the House and Senate about Soviet infiltration on Capitol Hill.

HEART OF AMERICA

Everything from toothbrushes to automobiles, farm equipment and that all-important item, energy must be produced by facilities provided by investors in American enterprises. And the stock exchanges are the marketplaces through which funds are funneled for each of these purposes. The stock market is the heart of the American economic system.

At present, because of years of hostile public policy, punitive taxation and regulation, investors and the "money market" are in a weakened financial condition. This condition exists amid forecasts that American corporations will need $2 trillion in new capital, including perhaps as much as $300 billion from new stock issues. If the U.S. is to continue living in the manner to which it has become accustomed and if even a portion of the high-sounding environmental, social and economic goals advocated by planners and government officials are to be realized, the capital MUST be forthcoming. Many proposals are in the works to encourage saving and investment and to stimulate a greater flow of capital to industries through the securities markets. None is more important than those having to do with taxes.

Mr. Henry H. Fowler, former Secretary of the Treasury under President Johnson, calls for a change in the capital gains tax--the tax on profits from the sale of investments. He says, "The incentives offered individual investors to risk capital under the existing tax structure have become insufficient to attract equity investment." The result has been a diminishing participation by individual Americans in the stock market--the source of much of the money for the realization of tomorrow's national dreams. Make no mistake: the health of the stock market is crucial to the health of the nation itself.

KEY TO TRADE BALANCE

If the United States is going to get moving again, simplistic political solutions to complex and very real economic problems must give way to a determination to act constructively in response to real facts.

The U.S. is the world's largest exporter, selling over $71 billion worth of products overseas in 1973. This export trade accounted for around 6.5 million jobs in the U.S., contributed in a major way to industrial growth and prosperity and produced tax revenues for the support of local, state and federal government. Unfortunately, it is not widely understood that U.S. multinational companies, having some $94 billion of investment in plants and manufacturing facilities overseas, are major generators of this flow of trade as well as of jobs and prosperity at home. For example, U.S. companies operating aborad have been accused of exporting jobs. This is simply not true. Speaking of this point, Mr. Willard F. Rockwell, Jr., chairman of the board of one of the nation's major aerospace and manufacturing companies, with plants in many nations of the world, has said, "...when an American company sets up a new operation in a foreign country, it is not exporting jobs, it's actually creating new jobs in America....American...companies with the highest rate of foreign investment increased their net employment in the U.S. about three times faster than those firms with the lowest rates." The reason is simply that U.S. companies with branches overseas increased their sales of goods from the United States through their overseas plants in countries where they might otherwise not have been able to compete at all because of trade barriers designed to shut out foreign products. U.S. multinational companies, over a 12-year period, increased their nonagricultural export sales over three times as fast as those companies based entirely within the U.S.

If America is to buy the things it must have, including petroleum supplies, from other nations, it must in return increase its ability to sell things to them. U.S.-based multinational corporations have become a key element in furthering that ability.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

JACK ANDERSON SAYS:
Cutbacks, Red Tape Endanger Lives of Millions of Workers
with LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON— Millions of American workers are exposed to deadly, poisonous substances on the job. Yet the effort to save their health, perhaps even their lives, has been seriously hampered by cutbacks and red tape.

The best estimate is that one out of every three workers in this country will come down with occupational diseases. Toxic substances, according to another estimate, causes 100,000 job-related deaths each year.

Yet even this disturbing death figure is now considered far too low. Labor Dept. experts have just learned that most of the nation's doctors are unable to diagnose occupational diseases. This means that most deaths from occupational diseases go unreported.

The Labor experts have also discovered that occupational injuries account for an alarming 96 per cent of all reported illnesses at nonagricultural places of work. Yet, industrial plants provide few health services and almost no environmental monitoring.

The Labor Dept. has appealed to Congress for more help to cope with the problem. Of 2,000 industrial hygienists in the United States, only 135 work for the department. Training programs have also been cut back.

As one Labor official told our associate Marc Smolonsky: "There is an appalling lack of manpower." Meanwhile, the problem steadily gets worse, not better, as thousands of new chemicals are developed each year in factories across the country.

The department has tried to set standards for these toxic chemicals as they appear. But President Ford, whose main emphasis is upon cutting costs, requires an inflationary impact statement before new standards can be put into effect. This has slowed the regulatory effort.

Nevertheless, a small, unsung staff is fighting a heroic battle to safeguard workers from occupational disease and death. Hundreds of thousands will die, however, because the problem has been given a low priority.

LIVING IN SIN: Some congressmen keep mistresses; others livein sin with the special interests.

The darling of the banking lobby, for example, is Rep. Thomas Ludlow Ashley, D.-Ohio. Whatever the bankers want from Congress, the bankers usually get. And Ashley helps them get it.

His service for the nation's financial institutions, coincidentally, helps to boost his own net worth. For he owns stocks and bonds in American Financial Corp., a blue-chip institution that owns, among other things, Cincinnati's Provident Bank where Ashley has a loan.

Banks are regulated by federal agencies which, in turn, are overseen by Congress. This is delegated to the Banking and Currency committees of the Senate and House, which also handle banking and housing legislation.

Ashley is the third man on the totem pole at the House Banking Committee. From his No. 3 perch, he exercises maximum influence with minimum visibility.

The late chairman, Wright Patman, D.-Texas, distrusted bankers instinctively. But invariably, Ashley would rally a majority of the members who routinely would overrule Patman and would vote more benefits for banks.

Once Ashley called a rump session to approve a banking bill that Patman had tried to block. While Patman was away, Ashely summoned the probanking members behind closed committee doors. For secrecy's sake, they worked without lights.

Ashley has always found the bankers most appreciative. At election time, they have often showered Ashley with more campaign money than he really needs. For he usually runs a low-key campaign, which costs comparative little.

Once, the Ohio Bankers Assn. wrote to bank presidents across the state, urging them to support the congressman "in every possible way."

During his last campaign, Ashley spent barely $23,000 on his election race. of this, banking associations, financial groups and bank executives contributed over $5,000.

After he was re-elected again, Ashley collected another $3,250 in honorariums last year for speeches to the Mortgage Bankers, American Bankers Assn., Ohio Citizens Trust Co., Ohio Savings and Loan Assn. and the New York Savings Banks Assn.

Ashley congenially pooh-poohed any suggestion of impropriety in his relationships with financial institutions. His holdings in American Financial Corp., he said, don't amount to much. He speaks to financial groups, he explained, to tell them about financial legislation.

"I don't have any problem with conflict of interest," he said emphatically. "Absolutely none. I can look anybody straight in the eye and say that."

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Most Intense Probes:
Teamsters hit by toughest investigations in 'Brotherhood's' turbulent history

WASHINGTON— Only the Loch Ness monster is targeted for investigation as intense as is the 2.3-million-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters with its $121 million central treasury, eight-billion-dollar pension funds and seven-plane air fleet. Its unperturbed leaders now are in Las Vegas's Jockey Club preparing for their quinquennial convention.

And reports from deep inside federal law networks are that there is far greater hope of discovering the Scottish monster in his watery lair than of finding Jimmy Hoffa in what is believed to be a watery grave. Few authorities now link the almost year-long disappearance of the erstwhile teamsters bantam boss with national teamsters politics.

But this hasn't made the Brotherhood any less an attractive target for hundreds of federal and congressional probers.

Out of these probes will spring new national political personalities -- as they did almost 20 years ago when the ancient "McClellan racket busting committee," officially known as the Senate Select Committee on Improper Activities in the Labor or Management Field, startled the pubic daily. Probing Hoffa and company the were the late Jack Kennedy; its chief counsel Bobby Kennedy; the ever-current headliner Frank Church; the wily old North Carolina Sen. Sam Ervin, and Sen. Barry Goldsater.

Today a Senate subcommittee almost similar to the old McClellan operation is headed by a lesser-known Georgia farmer, the 37-year-old Sen. Sam Nunn. Unknown, but not for long after this committee digs into alleged connections of the underworld with labor. Mind you, the message is that Nunn's group, the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations of the Committee on Government Operations, now organizing its cadres for a probe in depth similar to the McClellan inquiries of the late '50s, will go beyond the teamsters.

So this nation apparently is due for another investigative spectacular after the new Congress organizes in January 1977.

Nunn is gung ho and eager to go as is his fellow Georgian farmer now maneuvering for higher stakes. But the investigatory competition is tough. The Labor Department has several special units quietly digging into the $1.4 billion Chicago based Teamsters Central States, Southeast and Southwest pension fund. This is on a civil basis. Other units are looking into perhaps as much as another $6 billion in scattered treamster pension funds.

The Chicago dig will take at least another year. Objective is the search for possible violation of "effective fiduciary responsibility." Since Jan. 1, 1975, this phase has given the Labor Department tough weapons in probing any pension fund, its loans and the so-called finders fee crowd.

There are a gaggle of consultants who from time to time have received as much as $190,000 from locals for advice. There are all sorts of special fees to consulting companies in the Midwest.

This big Chicago pension fund, it has been learned, basically paid benefits out of income. Thus the $1.4 billion was investment money. "Play money," one top Labor Department official says. The "'corpus' wasn't touched." Some 70 per cent of it is in real estate. This is extraordinarily high.

This entire vast fund could be put in trusteeship eventually. Or if it is shown there were risky loans, the government could ask the trustees for restitution on the losses, if any.

On the criminal side, if any, there is the Department of Justice. It has a special team and reports to a special unit. The Labor and Justice Departments consult each other, clear with the other's findings so they don't crisscross and ruin each other's evidence.

Though "Labor's" accountants will take at least another year, no one now knows if there are any criminal violations. Some may crop up in the new Nunn committee researches -- and public hearings. Or in the careful look-see of the Senate Labor and Public Welfare Committee headed by New Jersey's Sen. Harrison "Pete" Williams. Or perhaps Miochigan's Sen. Robert Griffin may yet crash through with the launching of a select committee, such as that which was manned by Kennedy, Goldwater and Ervin, et al.

All this has been underway for almost a year on one front or another. The actual hacking away at the big Chicago fund records began on Feb. 1, 1976. And the Professional Drivers Counci, Inc. (PROD) burst in the other day with a new dimension.

Sugarless bread sweetens budget

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Sugarless bread could save dough for the baking industry, says a Washington State University researcher.

Bakers could save 2 cents or more a loaf by baking bread without sugar, said Dr. Patrick L. Finney, a cereal research technologist.

Commercial white bread contains about 10 per cent sugar in the raw dough, and the baked product may have a sugar content as high as 8 per cent, Finney said.

The high sugar content of bread is not desirable for texture, taste and probably nutrition, Finney said.

Sugar has always been necessary in bread making as food for yeast to consume in fermentation—the process which makes bread rise.

Finney said he has successfully baked several thousand loaves of bread in WSU research ovens by adding germinated wheat instead of sugar to dough. "It provides all the sugar you need," he said.

The germinated or malted wheat breaks down the natural sugar in wheat starches, which is then consumed by the yeast, and the bread rises without refined sugar, the scientist said.

Finney's father, Karl, who did the initial no-sugar bread research at the U.S. Agriculture Department's Grain Marketing Research Center in Manhattan, Kan., has predicted tha sugarless bread could save the baking industry $1 million a day.

The younger Finney believes this would save the baking industry about 200,000 pounds of sugar a day.

"Refined sugar is a foreign ingredient as far as protein in wheat flour," Finney said. "Because of this foreign substance, bread with a high sugar content tends to fall apart, like a building with poor architecture."

Finney said his father has received more than 500 inquiries from commercial bakeries about sugarless bread "and literally thousands of letters from homemakers."

It may take 15 years or only five years before the commercial bakeries start making sugarless bread in large quantities, Finney said.

"The research has been done," he said. "It's just a matter of the industry picking it up."

Fashion's new darling

Overhauling overalls spells sales

By Ellie Grossman

NEW YORK — (NEA) — Talk about odd couples. Over here, you've got Leighton A. Rosenthal, solid, middle-aged president of Work Wear Corp. of Cleveland. A man who calls things by their rightful names.

And hovering above him in a cloudbank of abstractions is Barbara Dulien, 27, a rather breathless, auburn-haired doll child. More from her in a moment.

"Sixty-two years ago, Work Wear started out producing overalls for painters, trainmen, agriculture workers, etc., and selling them to department stores," says Rosenthal. "Then in the mid-twenties, the chains such as Sears and J.C. Penney decided if they could get the housewife in to buy overalls for her husband, she'd do her other shopping there as well.

"So, they began selling work clothes at a loss to themselves. When the department stores followed suit, the manufacturer was at their mercy. It became too competitive. That's when my dad more or less founded the industrial, rental laundry industry which was a means of developing competitive business for your product.

"You'd get a laundry to go into the business of renting uniforms which weren't available in the store. And we sold Socony-Mobil the idea of putting all their service station attendants into a navy blue overall with a trim and a flying emblem. Once something like that starts, competition forces the others to follow, and it grew so that now there's an identification for each company."

Avis, Hertz, TWA, American Airlines, Texaco — even McDonald's — get their uniforms from Work Wear which operates 15 plants here, seven in Canada and three in Europe. "We are the largest supplier to the rental garment industry," Rosenthal says.

Now, here comes Barbara Dulien, designer, trend-teller and soothsayer, who sold Work Wear the idea of producing a ready-to-wear line of work clothes for women, just now appearing in better department stores around the country.

This is how it happened. "I was in Beverly Hills one morning," Miss Dulien says, "when the most fantastic graphic truck went by saying, we rent uniforms, and I thought, how marvelous to rent uniforms, have them laundered and delivered to your house, so I called them and talked to them and they introduced me to Mr. Rosenthal who was fantastic enough to pursue my concept."

You see, she explains, "after blue jeans, everyone was running around trying to find work clothes that only existed in surplus stores. The best people, the models and photographers, the people involved in such creative pursuits that they could not be involved with clothes, started wearing overalls in New York and Los Angeles and I felt there had to be a whole collection that would be accessible."

In other words, she saw a chance to capitalize on a trend.

"No."

No?

"It was spiritual," she says. "It was a whole natural thing that came from within. I saw it and pursued it. I know what people are feeling and what they want. I wanted to create functional clothes for the housewife, the secretary, the people who really want to get into fashion but find it difficult to wear a giant blouson workshirt such as they're showing in Paris this season. Joy of Stitching

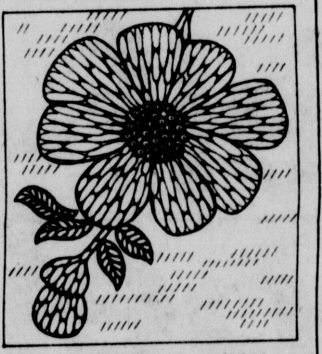
by ELSA WILLIAMS

HAPPY MARRIAGE

One of my great pleasures as I observe the embroidery students at my school is to see how, as they become more expert in their stitches, they develop a personal style and begin to express themselves in color and an individual blend of techniques.

To my mind there's no more effective "mix" than a combination of crewel embroidery on canvas against a needlepoint background. This uses all the skills of the embroiderer, giving her the best of both techniques. She's able to picture a complete small world and create not only the design but the texture and color of the "backdrop". Creativity has free rein.

While not many designs are planned for this crewel-canvas partnership, you'll find a number of patterns ideal for working this way. Once you begin, you'll discover that needlepoint and crewel have many stitches in common and that combining them doubles your pleasure.



Flowers embroidered just as you've worked them before in crewel seem almost to rise from the canvas against a simple shaded background of Basketweave. If you have trouble deciding which stitches to use, feel your way slowly. You might try flower centers in Tufted stitch or in French Knots. If these work out well, do a whole flower in crewel stitches or even several important flowers in a bouquet.

When using Long and Short stitch remember to lay your thread in the direction of the planned stitch before you actually put your needle through the canvas. In this way you can be sure the shading of the petals will be just as you want them. Use a sharp-pointed crewel needle rather than a blunt tapestry needle for this work and don't be afraid to pierce canvas threads or previous stitches to get a smooth, even outline.

Elsa Williams will reply to readers' questions of general interest in her column but all questions will be answered personally. Write to Elsa Williams, Box 3788, Grand Central Station, New York 10017.

As you become more expert in crewel-canvas you'll be able to work your entire design in crewel stitches and see for yourself how beautiful it looks against the soft background of canvas embroidery.

Dear Elsa,

I know you're especially fond of embroidering flowers so perhaps you can tell me how to make the lilies of the valley in a flower picture I'm working look more realistic. The instructions suggest Satin stitch and I've tried this but the result looks rather blurred and resembles oversized dots. The bell shape seems lost.

C.C.N.

Dear C.C.N.,

I've seen lilies of the valley turn out very well in Satin stitch. Here are two suggestions which may be helpful. Try a Split stitch outline before doing the Satin stitch to lift the little bell from the background and emphasize its shape.

If your flowers are too small for this treatment, try making each little bell with three Bullion Knots, meeting at the top of the bell and fanning out at its base. This will sharply delineate the flower shape.

Ann Landers

Hair hang-up bothers her

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please tell me why Americans are so hung up on hair? In Europe women do not shave their armpits or their legs and nobody gives a damn. In this country, if a woman has hair anyplace but on her head she is considered some sort of freak.

It so happens I am a brunet lady -- and a hairy one at that. I shave my legs because society says I must. When I wear a sleeveless dress, I also shave under my arms, which is a nuisance. Now my husband tells me if I want to go swimming with him this summer I must shave the tops of my legs, both front and back, from the knees up.

I resent this male chauvinism and told him I'd be happy to oblige, provided he shaves the tops of HIS legs also -- front and back. His reply was, "You're nuts."

Am I? I tried shaving the tops of my legs four years ago and ended up with half a dozen ingrown hairs. Please settle this. -- Hirsute Hanna From Urbana

Dear Hanna: If your legs are shaved from the knees down and you have an abundant growth from the knees up, you would be something of a conversation piece around the pool.

Since shaving causes you to have ingrown hair, try a depilatory or a wax job. They take more time than shaving but the results last longer and you won't get cuts, infections or ingrown hairs.

Dear Ann Landers: I'm an 18-year-old girl who would like to say a few words to "Smothered In Topeka." Her folks "embarrassed" her in front of her friends because they insisted on kissing her goodbye whenever she left the house. She said it made her feel like a baby.

I can truthfully say I cannot recall being kissed by either my mother or father. Dad died when I was 13 and I can't remember him ever touching me. It was as if there was a wall bwetween us.

When I mentioned this to my mother, she said, "He wasn't a person who could show his feelings." I then asked, "How about YOU, Mom?" Her answer was, "I guess I am pretty much the same way but that doesn't mean your father didn't love you -- or that I don't."

Her explanation never convinced me. All I know is I felt isolated -- starved for affection. It left a mark on me, a bad one. When I was 14, I started to sleep with any guy who asked. By the time I was 16 I was pregnant, lost the baby and a social worker (bless her) got me into therapy.

I understand a lot more now than I did then. But still there's that emptiness. When I marry and have children, I'm going to hug and kiss them to pieces. They'll KNOW I care. -- Hazard, Ky.

Dear Ky: Here's your letter. It contains a ton of information for both children and parents. Thanks for unloading.

Dear Ann Landers: My wife hates housework and the place sure looks it. She says any idiot can clean a house, and she'd rather do something that requires brains. (Cooking is also for dummies, according to her.)

Whenever you print something about a sloppy housekeeper or a bum cook, I ask my wife if she read Ann Landers today. It burns her up. Yesterday it happened again. She said, "I'll bet Ann Landers doesn't do one lick of cooking or cleaning." I said I'd ask. How about it? -- Mr. X

Dear Mr. X.: She's right. But I did for quite a few years. And my place always looked fairly presentable and nobody ever died from my cooking. Any more questions?

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — Would you please tell me how to remove gummed plastic tape from a painted bedroom wall. My daughter put it there to hold posters to the wall. Also, how does one remove the odor of popcorn from face towels that have a peculiar odor when they are damp. — MRS. J. Z.

DEAR MRS. J.Z. — Apply a slightly longer piece of tape on top of the one now on the wall — be sure they adhere together. Then pull the short loose end of the top piece. In most cases the one underneath will come off with the top one, if you give it a quick short yank.

I really do not know of a specific remedy for a popcorn odor and rather imagine it comes from butter that was on the corn. Rub the cut side of a lemon on the towels, or soak in water and lemon juice, or apply moistened salt. See if one of them will do the job. How about this, readers — does anyone have anything better? — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — If you are on a camping trip and your flashlight batteries seem to be getting weak, but cannot be replaced immediately, set them in the bright sunlight during the day. They will be TEMPORARILY rejuvenated. — SANDRA.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve concerns the price of clothing in half-sizes. They invariably cost a few dollars more. I think prices on say a size 16 and a 16½ should be the same unless one gets into extra large sizes. — BEATRICE.

DEAR POLLY — When making pudding of any kind I always stir it with a plastic pancake turner. This keeps the pudding from burning on the bottom and it is always smooth and lump free.

Also my husband always waxes our refrigerator with regular car wax. He applies it just as he does on his car and takes it off with a soft cloth. It stays shiny, rust free and splatters and grease marks wipe right off. — MARY ANN.

Miss Thompson to teach short course

Peggy Thompson

Peggy Thompson is instructor of the Reading Development short course, scheduled to begin June 15 in Bulding G of the Sikeston High School. She has taught more than 50 courses in the St. Louis area. She has taught Reading Development for the University of Missouri-St. Louis since 1968. Additionally, her career has been spent as teacher and principal of St. Matthews School in Champaign, Ill., as upper grade teacher in Little Flower School in Richmond Heights, Mo., and in Holy Redeemer School in Webster Groves, Mo. where she is teaching at present.

Miss Thompson graduated from St. Francis Academy in Joliet, Ill., and from the College of St. Francis, also in Joliet. Her expertise is in the discipline of arts and sciences with a concentrated study in English, theology, history, and education. She is doing graduate work at Southeast Missuri State Universtiy in Cape Girardeau.

You can still register for the June 15 class in Sikeston by contacting local extension centers or Kathryn Kinnard, Delta Center, Portageville, phone 379-5431. Enrollment is limited.

Sugarless bread sweetens budget

PULLMAN, Wash. (AP) — Sugarless bread could save dough for the baking industry, says a Washington State University researcher.

Bakers could save 2 cents or more a loaf by baking bread without sugar, said Dr. Patrick L. Finney, a cereal research technologist.

Commercial white bread contains about 10 per cent sugar in the raw dough, and the baked product may have a sugar content as high as 8 per cent, Finney said.

The high sugar content of bread is not desirable for texture, taste and probably nutrition, Finney said.

Sugar has always been necessary in bread making as food for yeast to consume in fermentation—the process which makes bread rise.

Finney said he has successfully baked several thousand loaves of bread in WSU research ovens by adding germinated wheat instead of sugar to dough. "It provides all the sugar you need," he said.

The germinated or malted wheat breaks down the natural sugar in wheat starches, which is then consumed by the yeast, and the bread rises without refined sugar, the scientist said.

Finney's father, Karl, who did the initial no-sugar bread research at the U.S. Agriculture Department's Grain Marketing Research Center in Manhattan, Kan., has predicted tha sugarless bread could save the baking industry $1 million a day.

The younger Finney believes this would save the baking industry about 200,000 pounds of sugar a day.

"Refined sugar is a foreign ingredient as far as protein in wheat flour," Finney said. "Because of this foreign substance, bread with a high sugar content tends to fall apart, like a building with poor architecture."

Finney said his father has received more than 500 inquiries from commercial bakeries about sugarless bread "and literally thousands of letters from homemakers."

It may take 15 years or only five years before the commercial bakeries start making sugarless bread in large quantities, Finney said.

"The research has been done," he said. "It's just a matter of the industry picking it up."

Fashion's new darling

Overhauling overalls spells sales

By Ellie Grossman

And hovering above him in a cloudbank of abstractions is Barbara Dulien, 27, a rather breathless, auburn-haired doll child. More from her in a moment.

"Sixty-two years ago, Work Wear started out producing overalls for painters, trainmen, agriculture workers, etc., and selling them to department stores," says Rosenthal. "Then in the mid-twenties, the chains such as Sears and J.C. Penney decided if they could get the housewife in to buy overalls for her husband, she'd do her other shopping there as well.

"So, they began selling work clothes at a loss to themselves. When the department stores followed suit, the manufacturer was at their mercy. It became too competitive. That's when my dad more or less founded the industrial, rental laundry industry which was a means of developing competitive business for your product.

"You'd get a laundry to go into the business of renting uniforms which weren't available in the store. And we sold Socony-Mobil the idea of putting all their service station attendants into a navy blue overall with a trim and a flying emblem. Once something like that starts, competition forces the others to follow, and it grew so that now there's an identification for each company."

Avis, Hertz, TWA, American Airlines, Texaco — even McDonald's — get their uniforms from Work Wear which operates 15 plants here, seven in Canada and three in Europe. "We are the largest supplier to the rental garment industry," Rosenthal says.

Now, here comes Barbara Dulien, designer, trend-teller and soothsayer, who sold Work Wear the idea of producing a ready-to-wear line of work clothes for women, just now appearing in better department stores around the country.

This is how it happened. "I was in Beverly Hills one morning," Miss Dulien says, "when the most fantastic graphic truck went by saying, we rent uniforms, and I thought, how marvelous to rent uniforms, have them laundered and delivered to your house, so I called them and talked to them and they introduced me to Mr. Rosenthal who was fantastic enough to pursue my concept."

You see,she explains,"after blue jeans, everyone was running around trying to find work clothes that only existed in surplus stores. The best people, the models and photographers, the people involved in such creative pursuits that they could not be involved with clothes, started wearing overalls in New York and Los Angeles and I felt there had to be a whole collection that would be accessible."

In other words, she saw a chance to capitalize on a trend.

"No."

No?

"It was spiritual," she says. "It was a whole natural thing that came from within. I saw it and pursued it. I know what people are feeling and what they want. I wanted to create functional clothes for the housewife, the secretary, the people who really want to get into fashion but find it difficult to wear a giant blouson workshirt such as they're showing in Paris this season. I didn't design the clothes, I took them from the factories Work Wear has and scaled them down so we have fitted work clothes. Mr. Rosenthal was fantastic. He edited the collection and guided it so it was marketable for the masses."

Miss Dulien understands the masses because she wrote fashion articles for Teen magazine and covered trends for the Macy's stores and "developed conceptional ideas in fashion." This was after attending UCLA where she "wanted to be a journalism major."

Reserve catcher finds Cardinal pitching easy

ST. LOUIS (P) — "I know who the best catcher is. I'm just happy to get a chance to play," reserve Bill Plummer said.

And, in the absence of a formal vote, the last part of his sentiments may have gone double for the remainder of the Cincinnati Reds Sunday.

"It was a dream day for an extra man," gushed Plummer, whose homer, triple and single accounted for seven Reds runs in a 13-2 rout of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I can't remember ever having a day like this unless it was in Little League," said Plummer, a fill-in for injured catcher Johnny Bench.

"I hope to have another day like this some time in my major league career, but if it never happens I'll still be happy. I'll still have this to remember."

Plummer's day, his most productive in five big league seasons, began with a single up the middle scoring Bob Bailey for the game's first run in the second inning.

Then, as Cincinnati renewed its assault on St. Louis starter Pete Falcone, 3-5, he drilled a bases-loaded triple in the third.

Cards reliever Harry Rasmussen set the 29-year-old catcher down on strikes before Plummer's bat again made contact in the sixth.

At that juncture, Danny Frisella quickly worked ahead on an 0-2 count and followed bv serving a pitch the Cincinnati player drilled over the left field wall to score three runs.

"All I know is it was a high and in fast ball," Plummer said of Frisella's offering. "I think he was trying to waste a pitch. It was almost like the ball stopped. I just wanted to hit it hard."

Plummer's hitting, which spearheaded a 17-hit Reds attack, boosted his batting average to .305 compared to a lifetime pace of .190.

"This is the first year I got to play much in spring training and play this much this early," he reflected. "I'm not going to hit .300, but I'm not going to embarrass myself."

The only embarrassment Sunday was that belonging to Cards pitchers, who were shelled for 43 Cincinnati hit and 29 runs during the three-game weekend series.

"After a game like that I'd think they'd need some rest," St. Louis' Reggie Smith said glumly. "They should have worn themselves out."

Eight extra-base Reds hits also included Tony Perez' two-run homer in support of rookie right-hander Pat Zachry, 5-1, who pitched seven innings and surrendered the first Cards run.

"You have a tendency to relax a little," the tall Zachry said of his four-hit performance. "I didn't have the zap today, but my fast ball was good enough."

Red Sox work back into race

By HOWARD SMITH
AP Sports Writer

Dick Pole went to the movies Saturday and he liked what he saw. Then he went out Sunday and pitched the Boston Red Sox back into the American League East pennant race.

Pole spent Saturday watching films of himself in a game against Baltimore last June. He was working a shutout at that time until leaving in the ninth with a fractured cheekbone after stopping a Tony Muser line drive with his face. But it wasn't the injury that Pole wanted to see.

"I was pitching well at that time, breaking into the starting rotation. I try to forget about the injury and I did while I was watching the films.

"I saw that now I was doing something wrong."

Pole didn't do much wrong against California Sunday, hurling seven shutout innings as Boston topped the Angels 4-1. The victory lifted the Red Sox into third place in the East, 5½ games behind front-running New York. Boston trailed by eight games as recently as last Wednesday.

Elsewhere in the American League, Texas bombed Detroit 16-6, Oakland split a pair with the New York Yankees, the A's winning 3-2 and the Yanks 5-2, Milwaukee outlasted Kansas City 4-3 in 14 innings, Minnesota swept two games from Baltimore, 3-2 and 11-6, and Chicago beat Cleveland twice, 3-2 and 5-0.

"When you're going terrible you try anything," said Pole, 2-3, of his movie session. "I noticed I wasn't striding on my follow-through, falling almost a foot short."

Pole allowed California six hits, struck out five batters and didn't walk any before leaving in favor of Reggie Cleveland in the eighth. Cleveland gave up a run-scoring single to Bobby Bonds for the lone Angels' run.

Carl Yastrzemski and Cecil Cooper accounted for the Boston offense against Nolan Ryan, 4-7. Yaz singled home a run in the first and another in the seventh, and Cooper had a two-run single in the fourth.

Rangers 16, Tigers 6

Tom Grieve and Juan Beniquez drove in three runs each as Texas pulled to within 2½ games of first-place Kansas City in AL West. The Rangers collected 16 base hits and wrapped it up with seven runs in the fifth inning, which included Bill Fahey's two-run single and Lenny Randle's two-run double. Nelson Briles, 5-2, beat Joe Coleman, 2-5.

A's 3-2, Yanks 2-5

Vida Blue, 6-5, got clutch relief pitching from Rollie Fingers to subdue New York in the opener. Claudell Washington singled in one run for Oakland and Phil Garner singled in the other two.

The Yanks rallied for four runs in the ninth to take the nightcap, the final three when Oscar Gamble belted a two-out homer off Fingers.

Boston used guts to win NBA championship

PHOENIX (AP) — The Boston Celtics admittedly are not a great team, but they are the 1976 National Basketball Association champions.

The grim, determined Celtics, winners of more league championships than any team in the 30-year history of the NBA, captured their 13th title in the past 20 years Monday, downing the Phoenix Suns 87-80.

Coach Tom Heinsohn, drenched with perspiration and champagne in the joyous Celtics lockerroom, called it a "total team effort, a fantastic job.

"We gutsed it out all season," added Heinsohn, savoring his 10th championship — eight as a player and two as a coach — with the Celtics.

"We had trouble all season offensively because of the makeup of our team," said Heinsohn, referring to Boston's age and lack of depth. In the final series against the longshot Suns, Boston's running game — so often a vital cog in the past — was missing to a great extent because of a painful foot injury to captain John Havlicek.

So Boston was forced to change its offensive game somewhat and design its defense to cope with the Sun's slowdown, pattern style of play.

And perhaps because of their experience, the Celtics were able to adjust and overcome the upstart Suns, who had begun the 10-team playoffs as the longest shot in the field of 10 but had finessed their way to the final round with upset victories over Seattle and Golden State.

The Celtics won the first two games of the series at Boston Garden and there was much talk of a possible four-game sweep in the best-of-seven nationally televised series, which began back on May 23.

But the Suns bounced back with two great victories at home. Those games were followed by the historic fifth game at Boston, where the Celtics outlasted the Suns 128-126 in a record three overtimes.

It was a game which figured to take a heavy toll on the older Celtics, whose roster includes Havlicek and Don Nelson, both 36, and Paul Silas, 32. Instead, it was the Suns who wilted.

Milwaukee Brewers edge Kansas City in 14th

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The big smile on Jim Colborn's face belied the fact that he had just toiled for 10 innings in the hot sun, pitching superbly but not getting credit for the victory.

"I don't care about that," said the hard-luck Milwaukee righthander. "This is the turning point for us. We needed this one, and we got it."

After battling to a 2-2 tie in nine innings, the Royals and Brewers swapped runs in the eleventh and blanked each other in the 12th and 13th. Then in the 14th Milwaukee pushed across a run on Sixto Lezcano's RBI single and reliever Jerry Augustine held off the Royals to allow the Brewers to nip their hosts, 4-3.

For Milwaukee, the victory was like a shot of Novacaine. Colborn, who gave up only five hits through 10 innings, had watched his record dip to 2-7, while losing six straight. The Brewers, occupying last place in the American League East, had dropped seven of their last eight, including some confidence-sapping final-inning decisions.

"We've turned the corner with this victory," Colborn said. "I would have liked to get the win, sure, but what matters is the team winning.

"You're going to see a different Milwaukee Brewers from now on. We've been playing below our potential and not thinking as positively as we should. Now we've decided we've had enough of all that."

First-year Brewer manager Alex Grammas stopped short of Colborn's sweeping predictions, but admitted an extra-inning triumph can have a soothing affect on any team's psyche.

"It''s always good to get a win," he said, "and maybe this is the start of something. We've been losing games like this all along. Four of our last seven loses have been in the last inning. It's awfully nice to be on the other side for a change."

The defeat snapped a five-game Kansas City winning streak, but still left the Royals atop the American League West.

"We should have beat them," said Manager Whitey Herzog. "We had our chances in almost every (extra) inning, with the right people up there. "The other guy (Colborn) pitched good, though. We were lucky to get two runs off him."

Dodgers hand Mets 10-3 loss

By FRANK BROWN
AP Sports Writer

There had been plenty of time on the bench for Cincinnati catcher Bill Plummer and Atlanta outfielder Tom Paciorek to think about having big days at the plate, winning baseball games for teams that seemingly had forgotten them.

Sunday, each made the best of his chances.

Plummer, in the lineup only 19 times in the Reds' first 51 games this National League season, paced Cincinnati's 13-2 rout of St. Louis by driving in seven runs with a home run, a triple and a single.

Paciorek, who had watched all but 26 of the Braves' first 49 contests, cracked his first homer of the year and added a triple and single in Atlanta's 14-8 rout of Montreal.

"It was a dream day for an extra man," said Plummer, a catcher who got his chance to play when Manager Sparky Anderson gave a rest to Reds regular Johnny Bench. The three hits gave Plummer 18 for the season while the seven RBI more than doubled his total and gave him 12 for the campaign.

Paciorek, with the three hits and two walks in his five times at bat against the Expos, said; "This is the first time I have ever done this since the minor leagues."

In the other NL games, Philadelphia belted San Francisco 9-3; Houston swept Chicago with a 2-0 decision in the opener and a 5-1 victory in the nightcap; Los Angeles clubbed New York 10-3, and San Diego topped Pittsburgh 6-1.

Paciorek's two-run homer capped a four-run sixth inning and Rowland Office's three-run shot keyed a four-run eighth as Atlanta shelled Montreal.

Bold forbes wins $117,000 purse

NEW YORK (AP) — Bold Forbes' performance in the Belmont Stakes reminded trainer Laz Barrera of Johnny Longden, the Hall of Fame jockey, telling him: "Laz, if you get on the lead, they have to catch you, then pass you.

"They are two things that are hard to do."

Bold Forbes broke on top Saturday and, with a quarter of a mile left, the Kentucky Derby winner was six lengths in front. Then McKenzie Bridge and Great Contractor come on in the stretch, trying to to catch Bold Forbes.

They just about did. But they couldn't accomplish the other thing — pass him.

Bold Forbes beat McKenzie Bridge by a neck, with Great Contractor another neck back.

It appeared that, in another two jumps, McKenzie Bridge would have been the winner.

"Two more jumps wouldn't have made any difference," said Darrel McHargue, who rode McKenzie Bridge. "This was a mile-and-a-half race, not a mile-and-a-half-and-two-jumps.

'When a horse that game has the lead all to himself, he's extremely dangerous."

Barrera discovered that Bold Forbes runs his fastest when he's on the rail and relaxes when he's not. So Angel Cordero Jr. had him well off the rail in front by six lengths after a half-mile in 47 seconds. He covered the first three quarters in 1:111-5, a full 21-5 seconds slower than the killing pace he set in the Preakness, when he finished third. At the end of 1¼ miles in the Belmont, he was still six lengths in front. Best Laid Plans was second.

Then came the stretch drive — and Cordero's words of encouragement to Bold Forbes.

Reserve catcher finds Cardinal pitching easy

ST. LOUIS (P) — "I know who the best catcher is. I'm just happy to get a chance to play," reserve Bill Plummer said.

And, in the absence of a formal vote, the last part of his sentiments may have gone double for the remainder of the Cincinnati Reds Sunday.

"It was a dream day for an extra man," gushed Plummer, whose homer, triple and single accounted for seven Reds runs in a 13-2 rout of the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I can't remember ever having a day like this unless it was in Little League," said Plummer, a fill-in for injured catcher Johnny Bench.

"I hope to have another day like this some time in my major league career, but if it never happens I'll still be happy. I'll still have this to remember."

Plummer's day, his most productive in five big league seasons, began with a single up the middle scoring Bob Bailey for the game's first run in the second inning.

Then, as Cincinnati renewed its assault on St. Louis starter Pete Falcone, 3-5, he drilled a bases-loaded triple in the third.

Cards reliever Harry Rasmussen set the 29-year-old catcher down on strikes before Plummer's bat again made contact in the sixth.

At that juncture, Danny Frisella quickly worked ahead on an 0-2 count and followed by serving a pitch the Cincinnati player drilled over the left field wall to score three runs.

"All I know is it was a high and in fast ball," Plummer said of Frisella's offering. "I think he was trying to waste a pitch. It was almost like the ball stopped. I just wanted to hit it hard."

Plummer's hitting, which spearheaded a 17-hit Reds attack, boosted his batting average to .305 compared to a lifetime pace of .190.

"This is the first year I got to play much in spring training and play this much this early," he reflected. "I'm not going to hit .300, but I'm not going to embarrass myself."

The only embarrassment Sunday was that belonging to Cards pitchers, who were shelled for 43 Cincinnati hit and 29 runs during the three-game weekend series.

"After a game like that I'd think they'd need some rest," St. Louis' Reggie Smith said glumly. "They should have worn themselves out."

Eight extra-base Reds hits also included Tony Perez' two-run homer in support of rookie right-hander Pat Zachry, 5-1, who pitched seven innings and surrendered the first Cards run.

"You have a tendency to relax a little," the tall Zachry said of his four-hit performance. "I didn't have the zap today, but my fast ball was good enough."

Bold forbes wins $117,000 purse

NEW YORK (AP) — Bold Forbes' performance in the Belmont Stakes reminded trainer Laz Barrera of Johnny Longden, the Hall of Fame jockey, telling him: "Laz, if you get on the lead, they have to catch you, then pass you.

"They are two things that are hard to do."

They just about did. But they couldn't accomplish the other thing — pass him.

It appeared that, in another two jumps, McKenzie Bridge would have been the winner.

"Two more jumps wouldn't have made any difference," said Darrel McHargue, who rode McKenzie Bridge. "This was a mile-and-a-half race, not a mile-and-a-half-and-two-jumps.

'When a horse that game has the lead all to himself, he's extremely dangerous."

Barrera discovered that Bold Forbes runs his fastest when he's on the rail and relaxes when he's not. So Angel Cordero Jr. had him well off the rail in front by six lengths after a half-mile in 47 seconds. He covered the first three quarters in 1:111-5, a full 21-5 seconds slower than the killing pace he set in the Preakness, when he finished third. At the end of 1¼ miles in the Belmont, he was still six lengths in front. Best Laid Plans was second.

Then came the stretch drive — and Cordero's words of encouragement to Bold Forbes.

Dodgers hand Mets 10-3 loss

There had been plenty of time on the bench for Cincinnati catcher Bill Plummer and Atlanta outfielder Tom Paciorek to think about having big days at the plate, winning baseball games for teams that seemingly had forgotten them.

Sunday, each made the best of his chances.

Plummer, in the lineup only 19 times in the Reds' first 51 games this National League season, paced Cincinnati's 13-2 rout of St. Louis by driving in seven runs with a home run, a triple and a single.

Paciorek, who had watched all but 26 of the Braves' first 49 contests, cracked his first homer of the year and added a triple and single in Atlanta's 14-8 rout of Montreal.

"It was a dream day for an extra man," said Plummer, a catcher who got his chance to play when Manager Sparky Anderson gave a rest to Reds regular Johnny Bench. The three hits gave Plummer 18 for the season while the seven RBI more than doubled his total and gave him 12 for the campaign.

Paciorek, with the three hits and two walks in his five times at bat against the Expos, said; "This is the first time I have ever done this since the minor leagues."

In the other NL games, Philadelphia belted San Francisco 9-3; Houston swept Chicago with a 2-0 decision in the opener and a 5-1 victory in the nightcap; Los Angeles clubbed New York 10-3, and San Diego topped Pittsburgh 6-1.

Paciorek's two-run homer capped a four-run sixth inning and Rowland Office's three-run shot keyed a four-run eighth as Atlanta shelled Montreal.

Kite wins Bicentennial Golf Classic playoff

"It's been a long time coming," sighed Tom Kite.

"I thought I'd win my first year on the tour. I didn't. I thought I'd win my second year. I didn't. I thought for sure I'd win in my third year. And I still didn't.

"I'd see these other guys out here who were winning tournaments and I'd say to myself, 'Gee, I can beat these guys.' And, maybe over the year, I would beat them. But they were winning tournaments and I wasn't.

"I got pretty disappointed, pretty dejected."

But now, in his fourth full season on the pro golf tour, Tom Kite is a winner at last. He turned back Terry Diehl with a winning par on the fifth hole of sudden death to take the title and the $40,000 first prize Sunday in the Bicentennial Golf Classic.

But it didn't come easily.

Kite had to chip in from 40 yards for a birdie that provided the momentum for a final round, five-under-par 66 that tied Diehl at 277, seven under par for 72 holes over the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

Kite had to drop a 45-50 foot putt for par on the 17th hole that kept his hopes alive.

Then, since he'd played almost an hour in front of the other contenders, he had to sit and wait. The 26-year-old Kite, an Austin, Tex., native who has played most of his career in the shadow of his Texas teammate Ben Crenshaw, had to watch from the sidelines as Diehl tied his score and two others — Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson — moved ahead of him. Pate, however, finished bogey-bogey to drop out of a playoff spot and Nelson played his last two holes bogey-double bogey.

And in the playoff, Kite managed to halve the first hole with a bogey — and he had to one-putt from 10-12 feet for that.

Kite, who shared the national collegiate title with Crenshaw in his senior year at Texas, pushed his earnings for the season to $100,224 after collecting the first prize in this event that formerly was known as the Philadelphia Classic.

At one time or another in the final round, nine different players — Diehl, Kite, Ken Still, Larry Nelson, Jerry Pate, Tom Purtzer, Jerry McGee, Masters champ Ray Floyd and Grier Jones — all led or shared the lead.

Pate's closing 70 left him one shot out of the playoff and third alone at 278. Nelson, with a 71, dropped back into a tie at 279 with Floyd and McGee. Floyd had a last round 70, McGee 71.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top final scores and money-winnings Sunday in the $200,000 Bicentennial Golf Classic on the 6,687 yard, par 71 Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course (x-won sudden death playoff):

Sikeston Saints lose Bi-State game, 6-3

The Sikeston Saints continued to struggle against the high calibre Bi-State League competition when the Perryville Stars handed them their third setback in four tries, 6-3, at V. F. W. Stadium Sunday afternoon. Righthander Ron Koenig, a product of Jefferson College in Hillsboro, used a mixture of slow curves and change-ups to weather a rocky start and pick up the complete- game victory. Sikeston reached Koenig for three runs on five hits in the first, but the 6-foot-5 moundsman stopped the host team on two hits through the next eight frames.

The contest was the first outing in two weeks for the Sikeston team. Their last four games had been rained out and the team bats showed the effects. After the promising first, Sikeston batters were off-stride all afternoon.

Righty ace Bob Blankenship started for Sikeston, but the curve baller just didn't have his best stuff on this afternoon. Perryville touched him for four runs in four innings, on ten hits. Mike Cooksey, a hard-thrower who had suffered with a sore arm, looked good in four innings of relief. So did Blankenship's younger brother, Richard, who hurled a perfect inning in his first Saints outing.

Hitting stars for Sikeston were few since they were held to seven hits. Catcher John Leible had two hits and two stolen bases. Leadoff man Bruce Lawrence doubled and walked and shortstop Bill Schatzley was on base three times, with two walks and a single.

The Stars racked Sikeston hurling for 14 hit, including three apiece by centerfielder Mark Gotto and first baseman Dave Erlacker.

Gotto, praised by many as the best outfielder in the league, made two brilliant catches to single- handedly break two Sikeston rallies. His double also started the Perryville three-run, third-inning rally that put the visitors ahead to stay.

Sikeston's 1-3 record puts them in fifth place in the six team league. The next Saints' game is a home encounter with Cairo, Illinois, Wednesday night at 8:00. It is a non-league game. Anna visits for a league game Friday.

Ashe determined to win

PARIS (AP) — If the sun doesn't go away, if the red clay courts bake a little harder, if the heat continues to liven up the balls he calls "bricks," Arthur Ashe thinks he just might become the first American in 21 years to win the French Open.

The thought is coming to him slowly at a place where he has never gotten through the quarter-finals, but Ashe stopped the kidding Sunday about his feeble chances here. His line was: "There's a seat for A. Ashe on every plane out of Paris to London."

The last American to win in Paris was Tony Trabert in 1955.

The talk got serious as the weather got hotter and Ashe brought some of his own smoke to the center court at Roland Garros Stadium, hitting seven service aces en route to beating Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 to advance into the round of 16.

In the first week of the $210,000 tournament, the red clay courts were made even slower than usual by consistantly cold, damp weather.

The sun not only hardened the clay and made Ashe's service pick up the zooming bounce that it missed, but it affected the low pressure balls whose deadened reaction favored the run-and-get players. As the balls heated up, they skipped faster.

"When I saw the sun, I started clicking my heels," Ashe grinned. "I'm getting the touch. I"m hitting the ball well. If you get the touch, there's not much an opponent can do. These balls are still bricks, though. Americans tend to flick their shots and these aren't balls for flicking."

Ashe led Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., into the round of 16. Solomon beat Jean-Francois Caujolle of France 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 and Gottfried defeated Ulrich Pinner of West Germany 7-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Fassbender said he thought Ashe had a real chance against Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the top seed trying for a third straight French title, and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, the No. 2 seed.

"The only thing I wonder about," Fassbender went on, "is whether he really thinks he can win. I know he doesn't think of himself as a clay-court player. If his head is right, and he has a positive attitude, that'll make a tremendous difference."

Borg plays Francois Jauffret of France today and Eddie Dibbs tries to become the first American to geT into the quarter-finals against Poland's Wojtek Fibak.

Pat Bradley captures Ladies $76,000 Classic

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — The cow bell on the porch of the Bradley home in Westford, Mass., rang long and loud Sunday evening at 6:15.

It signified to the neighbors that Pat Bradley had just captured the title in the Ladies Professional Golf Association $76,000 Classic at the Wykagyl Country Club.

The 25-year old Miss Bradley, on the tour for her third year, came through with a par four on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff with Judy Rankin, leading money winner on the LPGA trail.

For the Florida International University graduate, the victory was her first official one since turning professional after receiving her degree in physical education.

Last December, she won the Far East Classic in Melbourne, Australia, but that triumph was not recognized officially by the LPGA.

"After I won in Australia, I called home to tell my parents," explained an excited Miss Bradley, $14,000 richer for Sunday's win.

"It was 3 a.m. and my mother ran out on the porch and started clanging the cow bell despite the hour to let everyone know the good news.

"I've just gotten off the phone now, and while I was talking to my father (Richard), my mother was clanging the bell again. We're from a small town 40 miles northeast of Boston and everyone knows everyone. We call it a blanket town."

The Wykagyl Classic, sponsored by Girl Talk, a woman's magazine, might well have been called a 'blanket' tourney, too.

Miss Bradley and Mrs. Rankin actually finished in a four-way tie with Bonnie Lauer and Sandra Post at 217.

Miss Bradley sank an 18-foot putt, and Mrs. Rankin a three-footer while the other two missed.

For the day, Miss Bradley, who bogied the par five 18th, Mrs. Rankin and Miss Lauer each shot par 72 on a 6,169-yard course that was pelted by rain for almost three hours.

Kite wins Bicentennial Golf Classic playoff

"It's been a long time coming," sighed Tom Kite.

"I thought I'd win my first year on the tour. I didn't. I thought I'd win my second year. I didn't. I thought for sure I'd win in my third year. And I still didn't.

"I'd see these other guys out here who were winning tournaments and I'd say to myself, 'Gee, I can beat these guys.' And, maybe over the year, I would beat them. But they were winning tournaments and I wasn't.

"I got pretty disappointed, pretty dejected."

But now, in his fourth full season on the pro golf tour, Tom Kite is a winner at last. He turned back Terry Diehl with a winning par on the fifth hole of sudden death to take the title and the $40,000 first prize Sunday in the Bicentennial Golf Classic.

But it didn't come easily.

Kite had to chip in from 40 yards for a birdie that provided the momentum for a final round, five-under-par 66 that tied Diehl at 277, seven under par for 72 holes over the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

Kite had to drop a 45-50 foot putt for par on the 17th hole that kept his hopes alive.

Then, since he'd played almost an hour in front of the other contenders, he had to sit and wait. The 26-year-old Kite, an Austin, Tex., native who has played most of his career in the shadow of his Texas teammate Ben Crenshaw, had to watch from the sidelines as Diehl tied his score and two others — Jerry Pate and Larry Nelson — moved ahead of him. Pate, however, finished bogey-bogey to drop out of a playoff spot and Nelson played his last two holes bogey-double bogey.

And in the playoff, Kite managed to halve the first hole with a bogey — and he had to one-putt from 10-12 feet for that.

Kite, who shared the national collegiate title with Crenshaw in his senior year at Texas, pushed his earnings for the season to $100,224 after collecting the first prize in this event that formerly was known as the Philadelphia Classic.

At one time or another in the final round, nine different players — Diehl, Kite, Ken Still, Larry Nelson, Jerry Pate, Tom Purtzer, Jerry McGee, Masters champ Ray Floyd and Grier Jones — all led or shared the lead.

Pate's closing 70 left him one shot out of the playoff and third alone at 278. Nelson, with a 71, dropped back into a tie at 279 with Floyd and McGee. Floyd had a last round 70, McGee 71.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Top final scores and money-winnings Sunday in the $200,000 Bicentennial Golf Classic on the 6,687 yard, par 71 Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course (x-won sudden death playoff):

Sikeston Saints lose Bi-State game, 6-3

The Sikeston Saints continued to struggle against the high calibre Bi-State League competition when the Perryville Stars handed them their third setback in four tries, 6-3, at V. F. W. Stadium Sunday afternoon. Righthander Ron Koenig, a product of Jefferson College in Hillsboro, used a mixture of slow curves and change-ups to weather a rocky start and pick up the complete- game victory. Sikeston reached Koenig for three runs on five hits in the first, but the 6-foot-5 moundsman stopped the host team on two hits through the next eight frames.

The contest was the first outing in two weeks for the Sikeston team. Their last four games had been rained out and the team bats showed the effects. After the promising first, Sikeston batters were off-stride all afternoon.

Righty ace Bob Blankenship started for Sikeston, but the curve baller just didn't have his best stuff on this afternoon. Perryville touched him for four runs in four innings, on ten hits. Mike Cooksey, a hard-thrower who had suffered with a sore arm, looked good in four innings of relief. So did Blankenship's younger brother, Richard, who hurled a perfect inning in his first Saints outing.

Hitting stars for Sikeston were few since they were held to seven hits. Catcher John Leible had two hits and two stolen bases. Leadoff man Bruce Lawrence doubled and walked and shortstop Bill Schatzley was on base three times, with two walks and a single.

The Stars racked Sikeston hurling for 14 hit, including three apiece by centerfielder Mark Gotto and first baseman Dave Erlacker.

Gotto, praised by many as the best outfielder in the league, made two brilliant catches to single- handedly break two Sikeston rallies. His double also started the Perryville three-run, third-inning rally that put the visitors ahead to stay.

Sikeston's 1-3 record puts them in fifth place in the six team league. The next Saints' game is a home encounter with Cairo, Illinois, Wednesday night at 8:00. It is a non-league game. Anna visits for a league game Friday.

Ashe determined to win

PARIS (AP) — If the sun doesn't go away, if the red clay courts bake a little harder, if the heat continues to liven up the balls he calls "bricks," Arthur Ashe thinks he just might become the first American in 21 years to win the French Open.

The thought is coming to him slowly at a place where he has never gotten through the quarter-finals, but Ashe stopped the kidding Sunday about his feeble chances here. His line was: "There's a seat for A. Ashe on every plane out of Paris to London."

The last American to win in Paris was Tony Trabert in 1955.

The talk got serious as the weather got hotter and Ashe brought some of his own smoke to the center court at Roland Garros Stadium, hitting seven service aces en route to beating Jurgen Fassbender of West Germany 6-1, 6-2, 6-2 to advance into the round of 16.

In the first week of the $210,000 tournament, the red clay courts were made even slower than usual by consistantly cold, damp weather.

The sun not only hardened the clay and made Ashe's service pick up the zooming bounce that it missed, but it affected the low pressure balls whose deadened reaction favored the run-and-get players. As the balls heated up, they skipped faster.

"When I saw the sun, I started clicking my heels," Ashe grinned. "I'm getting the touch. I"m hitting the ball well. If you get the touch, there's not much an opponent can do. These balls are still bricks, though. Americans tend to flick their shots and these aren't balls for flicking."

Ashe led Harold Solomon of Silver Spring, Md., and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., into the round of 16. Solomon beat Jean-Francois Caujolle of France 6-4, 6-3, 6-1 and Gottfried defeated Ulrich Pinner of West Germany 7-6, 6-3, 6-0.

Fassbender said he thought Ashe had a real chance against Sweden's Bjorn Borg, the top seed trying for a third straight French title, and Guilermo Vilas of Argentina, the No. 2 seed.

"The only thing I wonder about," Fassbender went on, "is whether he really thinks he can win. I know he doesn't think of himself as a clay-court player. If his head is right, and he has a positive attitude, that'll make a tremendous difference."

Pat Bradley captures Ladies $76,000 Classic

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — The cow bell on the porch of the Bradley home in Westford, Mass., rang long and loud Sunday evening at 6:15.

It signified to the neighbors that Pat Bradley had just captured the title in the Ladies Professional Golf Association $76,000 Classic at the Wykagyl Country Club.

The 25-year old Miss Bradley, on the tour for her third year, came through with a par four on the second hole of a sudden-death playoff with Judy Rankin, leading money winner on the LPGA trail.

For the Florida International University graduate, the victory was her first official one since turning professional after receiving her degree in physical education.

Last December, she won the Far East Classic in Melbourne, Australia, but that triumph was not recognized officially by the LPGA.

"After I won in Australia, I called home to tell my parents," explained an excited Miss Bradley, $14,000 richer for Sunday's win.

"It was 3 a.m. and my mother ran out on the porch and started clanging the cow bell despite the hour to let everyone know the good news.

"I've just gotten off the phone now, and while I was talking to my father (Richard), my mother was clanging the bell again. We're from a small town 40 miles northeast of Boston and everyone knows everyone. We call it a blanket town."

The Wykagyl Classic, sponsored by Girl Talk, a woman's magazine, might well have been called a 'blanket' tourney, too.

Miss Bradley and Mrs. Rankin actually finished in a four-way tie with Bonnie Lauer and Sandra Post at 217.

Miss Bradley sank an 18-foot putt, and Mrs. Rankin a three-footer while the other two missed.

For the day, Miss Bradley, who bogied the par five 18th, Mrs. Rankin and Miss Lauer each shot par 72 on a 6,169-yard course that was pelted by rain for almost three hours.

BHS announces top students

Stephanie Miller

Martin Brady

BLOOMFIELD— Stephanie Ann Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dacey L. Miller, was named valedictorian and Martin Brady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Brady, was announced as salutatorian of the 1976 graduating class in the awards assembly held recently at Bloomfield High School.

Miss Miller received awards in band, journalism, mathematics analysis and biology II; was voted most athletic, most versatile, most studious and most likely to succeed by her fellow students; was awarded a certificate of recognition by the Missouri School-College Relations Commission; and was selected to membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

While maintaining a 3.998 grade point average, Stephanie participated in numerous school activities. She was a member of the Student Council, president of Beta Club and district Beta Club president, Future Business Leaders of America chapter president and FBLA state parliamentarian, member of the FB LA parliamentary team which placed first in state competition and attended the FBLA national conference last summer in Miami Beach.

She was drum majorette of the Marching Wildcats band and for two years, was first chair flute in the Stoddard County Honor Band. She served her senior year as co-editor of the yearbook.

For three years she was captain of the varsity volleyball team and was named most valuable player and best offensive player for two years. She lettered in tennis and participated in numerous Amateur Athletic Union track and field meets.

Miss Miller has been an active member of First Baptist Church and has accepted an academic and athletic scholarship to Southwest Baptist College in Bolivar. She also received a $100 Community Scholarship.

Brady received awards in chemistry, trigonometry, accounting and forms in writing; was voted most studious, most likely to succeed and most verstatile by his fellow students; was awarded a certificate of recognition by the Missouri School-College Relations Commission and was selected to membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

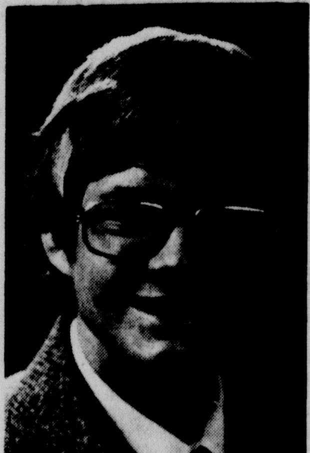
He has served as president of Beta Club and as a member of the Pep Club, high school choir and FBLA. He placed third in accounting at the FBLA conference and lettered in tennis as the team's No. 1 player.

Brady has accepted a scholarship sponsored by Bank of Bloomfield and from Westminster College at Fulton, where he will major in economics and business administration.

Miss Miller and Brady were the principal speakers at commencement exercises held May 21 in the school gymnasium.

Kelly High names top two in '76

Susan Schiwitz



Kenny Hulshof

BENTON— Susan Elizabeth Schiwitz was named valedictorian and Kenny Charles Hulshof salutatorian of the 1976 graduating class during May 27 commencement exercises at Thomas W. Kelly High School.

Miss Schiwitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schiwitz of Benton, served as Beta Club officer for two years and as a Future Homemakers of America chapter officer for three years.

She was a member of the Foreign Language Club and the concert and marching bands and was chosen as a class personality for four years.

As valedictorian, she received a scholarship to Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. She has also received social studies, language, Spanish, business and scholastic awards.

Hulshof, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hulshof of Bertrand Route One, was a member of the school basketball and baseball teams, Beta Club, Student Council and Foreing Language Club and served as sophomore class president, senior class secretary and class personality for four years. He also participated in the Sophomore pilgrimage.

Besides being a Future Farmers of America state farmer, he has served as chapter president and area vice president and was recently elected state vice president.

He has received language, Spanish, biology, chemistry and FFA awards and was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Hulshof was presented a curators scholarship to attend University of Missouri-Columbia, where he plans to enroll this fall.

Social Security offers direct deposit program

The Social Security Administration now offers a service that makes it possible for people to have their social security or supplemental security income checks deposited directly in their checking or savings account, reminds Donald J. Hart, branch manager of the Sikeston office, 102 Smith St. The check is deposited the same day it ordinarly would be delivered at home.

This program-- called direct deposit-- is entirely voluntary, emphasizes Hart. People who do not specifically request direct deposit will continue to get social security or SSI checks mailed to their homes. But those who do want their checks mailed to a bank, savings and loan association, credit union or other financial organization may do so by filling out an authorization form available at most financial organizations.

Completion of the form -- SF-1199 -- only authorizes them to do so. Most financial organizations in Scott, New Madrid and Mississippi counties have the necessary forms.

Thefts of social security or supplemental security income checks may not be a major crime category, but loss of these checks can be shattering for someone whose monthly income is limited and these checks represent the bulk of their income. It may take weeks before a stolen check can be replaced.

Other advantages of this program include the fact that the recipients do not have any problem in cashing their check because it goes directly into their account. Even if you are away from home, the check is deposited instead of setting in your mailbox. And you don't have to stand in line to cash or deposit your check either.

Since the direct deposit program began last fall, more than three million beneficiaries have signed up for direct deposit of their checks. In Missouri, over 73,000 persons now receive the benefit.

If you have any questions regarding this service, contact the Sikeston Social Security office. The telephone number is 471-9503.

BHS announces top students

BLOOMFIELD— Stephanie Ann Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dacey L. Miller, was named valedictorian and Martin Brady, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Brady, was announced as salutatorian of the 1976 graduating class in the awards assembly held recently at Bloomfield High School.

Stephanie Miller

Martin Brady

Miss Miller received awards in band, journalism, mathematics analysis and biology II; was voted most athletic, most versatile, most studious and most likely to succeed by her fellow students; was awarded a certificate of recognition by the Missouri School-College Relations Commission; and was selected to membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

While maintaining a 3.998 grade point average, Stephanie participated in numerous school activities. She was a member of the Student Council, president of Beta Club and district Beta Club president, Future Business Leaders of America chapter president and FBLA state parliamentarian, member of the FB LA parliamentary team which placed first in state competition and attended the FBLA national conference last summer in Miami Beach.

She was drum majorette of the Marching Wildcats band and for two years, was first chair flute in the Stoddard County Honor Band. She served her senior year as co-editor of the yearbook.

For three years she was captain of the varsity volleyball team and was named most valuable player and best offensive player for two years. She lettered in tennis and participated in numerous Amateur Athletic Union track and field meets.

Miss Miller has been an active member of First Baptist Church and has accepted an academic and athletic scholarship to Southwest Baptist College in Bolivar. She also received a $100 Community Scholarship.

Brady received awards in chemistry, trigonometry, accounting and forms in writing; was voted most studious, most likely to succeed and most verstatile by his fellow students; was awarded a certificate of recognition by the Missouri School-College Relations Commission and was selected to membership in the Society of Distinguished American High School Students.

He has served as president of Beta Club and as a member of the Pep Club, high school choir and FBLA. He placed third in accounting at the FBLA conference and lettered in tennis as the team's No. 1 player.

Brady has accepted a scholarship sponsored by Bank of Bloomfield and from Westminster College at Fulton, where he will major in economics and business administration.

Miss Miller and Brady were the principal speakers at commencement exercises held May 21 in the school gymnasium.

Kelly High names top two in '76

Susan Schiwitz

Kenny Hulshof

Miss Schiwitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Schiwitz of Benton, served as Beta Club officer for two years and as a Future Homemakers of America chapter officer for three years.

She was a member of the Foreign Language Club and the concert and marching bands and was chosen as a class personality for four years.

As valedictorian, she received a scholarship to Southeast Missouri State University in Cape Girardeau. She has also received social studies, language, Spanish, business and scholastic awards.

Hulshof, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hulshof of Bertrand Route One, was a member of the school basketball and baseball teams, Beta Club, Student Council and Foreing Language Club and served as sophomore class president, senior class secretary and class personality for four years. He also participated in the Sophomore pilgrimage.

Besides being a Future Farmers of America state farmer, he has served as chapter president and area vice president and was recently elected state vice president.

He has received language, Spanish, biology, chemistry and FFA awards and was listed in Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Hulshof was presented a curators scholarship to attend University of Missouri-Columbia, where he plans to enroll this fall.

Social Security offers direct deposit program

The Social Security Administration now offers a service that makes it possible for people to have their social security or supplemental security income checks deposited directly in their checking or savings account, reminds Donald J. Hart, branch manager of the Sikeston office, 102 Smith St. The check is deposited the same day it ordinarly would be delivered at home.

This program-- called direct deposit-- is entirely voluntary, emphasizes Hart. People who do not specifically request direct deposit will continue to get social security or SSI checks mailed to their homes. But those who do want their checks mailed to a bank, savings and loan association, credit union or other financial organization may do so by filling out an authorization form available at most financial organizations.

Completion of the form -- SF-1199 -- only authorizes them to do so. Most financial organizations in Scott, New Madrid and Mississippi counties have the necessary forms.

Thefts of social security or supplemental security income checks may not be a major crime category, but loss of these checks can be shattering for someone whose monthly income is limited and these checks represent the bulk of their income. It may take weeks before a stolen check can be replaced.

Other advantages of this program include the fact that the recipients do not have any problem in cashing their check because it goes directly into their account. Even if you are away from home, the check is deposited instead of setting in your mailbox. And you don't have to stand in line to cash or deposit your check either.

Since the direct deposit program began last fall, more than three million beneficiaries have signed up for direct deposit of their checks. In Missouri, over 73,000 persons now receive the benefit.

If you have any questions regarding this service, contact the Sikeston Social Security office. The telephone number is 471-9503.

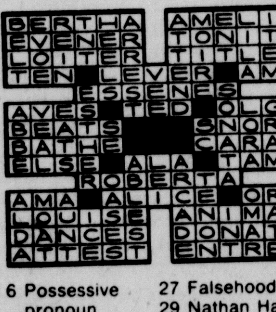
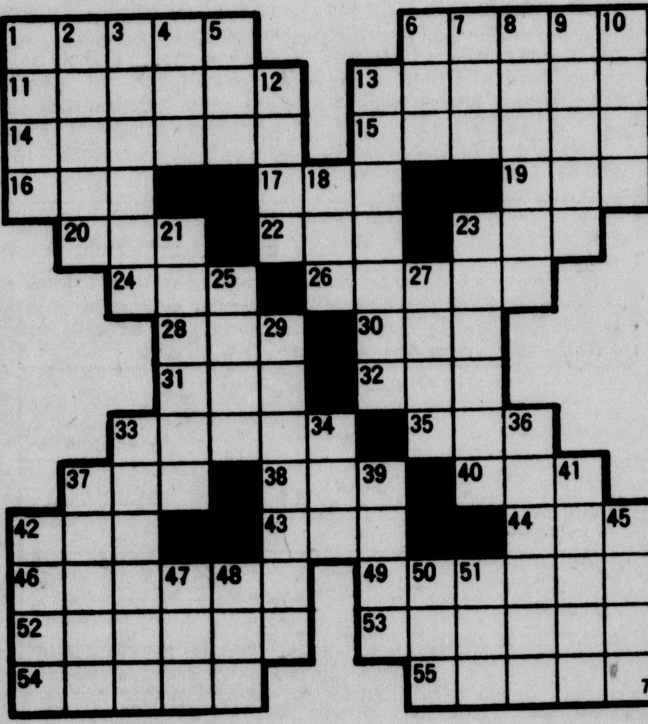
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1654, the coronation of Louis the 14th as King of France took place at Rheims.

On this date:

In 1862, the United States and Britain signed a treaty for suppression of the slave trade.

In 1940, in World War Two, organized resistance against German invaders ended in Norway.

In 1967, in the Middle East Six-Day War, Israeli forces driving into Egypt reached the banks of the Suez Cnal.

Ten years ago: Seventy-three deaths were reported after 30 inches of rain flooded the Central American city of Rafael, Honduras.

Five years ago: A (m) million people were tied up in traffic jams in the New York City area as drawbridgs were locked open in a surprise strike by bridge operators for pension improvements.

One year ago: The United States withdrew its last combat aircraft based on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan.

Today's birthdays: Singer Tom Jones is 36 years old. Poet Gwendolyn Brooks is 59. Violinist Jaime Laredo is 35.

Thought for today: Never tell the truth to people who are not worthy of it—Mark Twain, American humorist, 1835-1910.

Bicentennial footnote: Two-hundred years ago today, history was made at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia as Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced three resolutions calling for total American independence from Britain.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1654, the coronation of Louis the 14th as King of France took place at Rheims.

On this date:

In 1862, the United States and Britain signed a treaty for suppression of the slave trade.

In 1940, in World War Two, organized resistance against German invaders ended in Norway.

In 1967, in the Middle East Six-Day War, Israeli forces driving into Egypt reached the banks of the Suez Cnal.

Ten years ago: Seventy-three deaths were reported after 30 inches of rain flooded the Central American city of Rafael, Honduras.

Five years ago: A (m) million people were tied up in traffic jams in the New York City area as drawbridgs were locked open in a surprise strike by bridge operators for pension improvements.

One year ago: The United States withdrew its last combat aircraft based on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan.

Today's birthdays: Singer Tom Jones is 36 years old. Poet Gwendolyn Brooks is 59. Violinist Jaime Laredo is 35.

Thought for today: Never tell the truth to people who are not worthy of it—Mark Twain, American humorist, 1835-1910.

Bicentennial footnote: Two-hundred years ago today, history was made at the Continental Congress in Philadelphia as Richard Henry Lee of Virginia introduced three resolutions calling for total American independence from Britain.

Malone Theatre to be remodeled

50 years ago
June 7, 1926

Miss Mary Louise Brite left the first of the week for Emporia, Kas., for study in the summer school of the State Teachers' College.

Miss M. E. Martin will leave Monday for St. Louis. While there she will take a course in hair dressing. She expects to be gone two or three monts. Mrs. A. B. Proffer will take care of the shop during her absence.

Work on the building which the Gerhardt Construction Co., of Cape Girardeau is erecting for C.D.Matthews at the corner of Malone avenue and South Kingshighway, is rapidly progressing and should be finished in six weeks time. Sensenbaugh Bros. will occupy the building when it is completed.

Plans are being made at present for the remodeling of the front of the Malone Theatre at a near date. The tentative plans provide for a changing about of the front entrances and the box office. The box office will be changed from its present position at the side to a position in the front center with the entrances on either side. Where the box office now is, a ladies rest room, equipped with all conveniences, is to be placed.

After 31 years with the company and 14 years as manager of the Sikeston store, E. E. Leighninger is retiring July 1st as manager of the J. C. Penney Co., Inc., store here and leaving the employ of the company.

What's the law?

The case of the apes

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

To make sure that no one made a monkey out of Adam, a statute was passed that made it a crime to teach that mankind ascended from a lower form of animal.

Consequently, not wishing to be tossed in the pokey as a lawbreaker, Mr. Milktoast, Daisy Mae's high school teacher, refused to give any instruction on evolution, even though it was part of the school curriculum.

Insisting that their daughter was being deprived of a full and complete scientific education, Daisy Mae's parents hurried off to court demanding that the antievolution statute be declared unconstitutional.

"When the jump was made from ape to human," they complained to a judge, "those old fogies that passed that law must have forgotten to jump. Obviously, their idea was to restrict scientific learning in favor of religious dogma."

"A state has the right to prescribe the curriculum in its pubilc schools," was the answer, "which includes excluding any theory deemed not to be in the public interest. And, in this state, we think the best thing to do about evolution is to try and live it down."

"IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the antievolution statute?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that, while a state has the right to prescribe the curriculum for its public schools, it may not prohibit the teaching of a scientific theory or doctrine where the prohibition is based upon reasons that violate the provisions of the U.S. Constitution. In this case, concluded the judge, the purpose of the antievolution statute was to establish a religious doctrine in schools as to the origin of man which violates the freedom of religion mandate of the First Amendment.

Film directors tells about stars in book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Josh Logan has always been outspoken, whether talking about his bouts with mental illness or directing actors in plays and films. So it's no surprise that his memoirs prove frank and candid about the greats he has worked with.

"It was a terribly painful thing to do," said the director of his three-year ordeal in writing "Josh" (Delacorte, $10). "I didn't set out to be nasty to anyone, yet I had to be honest.

"I don't approve of books that are written for revenge. The most loathesome thing I have read recently is the first chapter of Truman Capote's 'Answered Prayers.' It's simply terrible how he has bitten the hands that fed him — people who invited him to dinner and to weekends in the country. And then to write so scatalogically about them."

Logan said he had feared the results of his honesty about certain personalities. For instance, Henry Fonda, whom he had directed in the play "Mister Roberts."

Fonda had escaped a film contract to play "Roberts," which Logan had written with Thomas Heggen, author of the novel. The director-star relationship remained fairly smooth until Fonda took the play on the road. Before the Los Angeles opening, Logan felt the show had deteriorated because the entire cast was trying to play Doug Roberts.

The director tried to restore the original spirit, Fonda rebelled, said he wouldn't appear in the movie if Logan directed, as had been promised. Logan withdrew.

"I thought I had been rough on Fonda in the book," the author remarked. "But he called me last night and said he thought the book was terrific."

He had directed several Rodgers and Hart musicals, as well as "Annie Get Your Gun," produced by Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. Logan and Leland Hayward bought the rights to "Tales of the South Pacific" and gave Rodgers and Hammerstein 51 per cent interest to write the show.

When Hammerstein bogged down in the writing, Logan collaborated and was allowed coauthorship credit. But not the author's royalties. Thus he was deprived of a lifelong royalty on the classic that he coauthored and staged.

He is convinced that Rodgers, who had become "a monument," had enforced the decision. In midrehearsal Logan was told to sign his contract within two hours or he would be fired.

"My name had been so minimized that I lived through years of having people praise 'South Pacific' in my presence without knowing I had had anything to do with it," he writes. The final ignominy came when his name was mistakenly left off the 1950 Pulitzer Prize for Drama.

Logan said Bennett Cerf had nagged him for years about writing his memoirs — "it was almost a relief when Bennett died." But then John Dodds of Putnam took up the campaign.

He admitted writing "Josh" had been a struggle: "Dialogue for plays is easy; it can be bad grammar and still be acceptable. Prose has to be the king's English."

Moldy hay harms lungs

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I contracted farmer's lung by inhaling moldy hay, feeding our pet rabbits. I am going through a bad experience with coughing and spitting constantly. I am under a doctor's care — taking medications for the coughing spells and for my throat inflammation that I suffered. The doctor told me I have an allergy to moldy hay and this disease will take some time to go away. I am still spitting watery and foamy material more than five weeks after I inhaled this moldy hay.

Can you tell me more about this farmer's lung? Is there a possibility to get shots if this is an allergy? I hope you can help me with more information.

DEAR READER — Yes it is an allergy. It is caused by the spores of fungi. The spores are inhaled and when enough of them reach the tiny air sacs, the alveoli, in the lungs they sensitize the lung membrane. The next time you are exposed to more of the spores you have an allergic response of the lung tissues. They swell and are inflamed. Obviously they are not much good then for exchanging oxygen and carbon dioxide.

The inflammation results in formation of excess secretions that must be removed from the lungs, hence the coughing spells. The amount of sputum produced is usually limited.

The disease can lead to fibrosis and scarring of the lung tissues, causing permanent lung damage. If you have just one attack you usually recover completely with no important residual lung damage.

The fungi spores that cause similar illnesses are also in the filters of air conditioners. So this is a warning to my readers to be sure and change their air conditioner filters regularly and keep the system clean. Similar infections from fungi spores result in fungi from bird droppings, called bird-breeder's lung. There is a whole series of these called, maplebark-stripper's lung, mushroom worker's lung and in sugar cane workers, bagassosis.

The illness causes fever, chills, malaise, cough and sometimes chest pain and weight loss. The symptoms will come on the same day of exposure in the person who is already sensitized.

The chest X ray may be normal or show a patchy generalized distribution of the inflammation. There may be changes in the lung function tests associated with gas exchange for normal respiration.

You can get some relief from symptoms from the adrenocortical hormones such as cortisone and related medications. It is not definite though that these will prevent fibrosis and changes in the lung that can follow as a complication of the disease.

America looks at the increasing proportion of population over 65

The following is the first of three articles on America's growing elderly population. It looks at the social and economic ramifications of having an increasing proportion of the population over 65.

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Get ready for a shock, America: You're getting a little older every day. Soon you will need more hospital units for the eldery, more nurses trained to care for them.

You will be under pressure to change your Social Security and pension systems, to reconsider the way you force people to retire.

Your swelling population of old people will press you increasingly to create new jobs for them, both private enterprise and government programs that draw on the skills of retired professionals.

They will seek government programs to retrain them for new jobs and will be banging increasingly on the doors of your colleges and universities, even as the number of traditional college-age youth drops off.

These are no idle predictions. They are based on headcounts of people already born, plus predictions in present trends in births and deaths.

Today there are 1,600 more Americans over 65 than there were yesterday. Tomorrow the number will grow again, and by the year 2020 — when the post-World War II baby boom crop passes age 65 — there will be an estimated 43 million older Americans, almost twice as many as there are now.

About one in 10 Americans is over 65 today. But if young people continue their present taste for late marriage and small families, the year 2020 will see at least one in six Americans over 65.

And because women probably will continue to live longer than men, the 65 and older population of the future will be largely female, most of them widows.

Strains on the Social Security system are among the most pressing problems created by this "gray revolution."

Under the present system, benefits to retired people are paid from the payroll taxes of those presently in the work force. That means that today's young and middle-aged are putting money aside, not for their own retirement, but for those now retired.

Who will pay the retirement benefits of the baby boom generation?

Chances are it will still be the young and middle-aged, but it may cost them twice as much as it does now. The Social Security Administration estimates that in the year 2020, there will be 2.2 persons working for every one drawing retirement benefits. That compares to 3.2 workers for every beneficiary today.

Last year the administration estimated that by 2025, each worker may have to contribute 10.2 per cent of his salary to Social Security, compared to the 5.4 per cent he throws in today. Under present law, the employer contributes the some amount to the system.

Such a move is likely to be unpopular with the working force. But political pressure from pensioners, already strong, will increase as their numbers grow.

Olympics to Watergate Mathias goes home

NEW YORK (AP) — A couple of years ago, Robert Bruce Mathias of Tulare, Calif., was riding a star that appeared shooting for one of the brightest spots in the political heavens.

His credentials were staggeringly impressive:

A football hero at Stanford.

Consecutive Olympic gold medals in the decathlon, most demanding of all events, in 1948 and 1952 and hailed as the "world's No. 1 athlete."

Two and a half years in the Marine Corps.

Eight years a congressman from California, being groomed for the higher echelon of the Republican party.

Presidential timber? Perhaps. All the ingredients were there.

Then came Watergate.

"I was not personally involved," Mathias said. "But I was a Republican and I was from California. Naturally, I knew President Nixon but I did not campaign for him because I was busy campaigning for myself.

"It made no difference. Watergate created a tremendous apathy among Republicans as with all voters. Republicans didn't turn out to vote for anybody."

First, Mathias' district was restructured, making it 60 per cent Democratic, he said. Then the Watergate scandal exploded. After serving four terms, Mathias was beaten by Democrat John Krebs in his bid for re-election to Congress.

Mathias remained in Washington as a member of President Ford's re-election committee, his specific job being to organize the finance chairmen in the various states. This work done, Mathias is now prepared to return to his native California and enter private life.

"We are moving to Fresno," Mathias said from his home in Falls Church, Va., and referring to his wife, Melba, a college sweetheart, and three daughters, Romel, 21, a nurse; Megan, 18, and Marissa, 14.

"I have two camps, one for boys and another for girls, in California. About 800 kids. I intend to devote a lot of time to them. I probably will do some public relations. As for politics, I plan to play it cool. It all depends on whether there is a reapportionment of my district."

No U. S. Olympic athlete—perhaps with the exception of the great Jesse Owens—has received the adulation that was showered on Mathias after his back-to-back triumphs in the decathlon, an unprecedented feat.

Track historians hailed him as a greater all-around athlete than Jim Thorpe. He was named The Associated Press' "Male Athlete of the Year" in 1952.

Mathias was a 17-year-old high schooler when he went to London for the Olympic Games in 1948 to face the world's best all-around athletes, all older and more experienced.

The decathlon is the most gruelling of all Olympic events, consisting of four running events (the 100, 400 and 1,500 meters plus the 110-meter hurdles) and six field events (javelin, discus, shot put, pole vault, broad jump and high jump), covering two full days of competition. It is the Olympics' ultimate test of speed, strength and endurance.

The athlete is scored in relation to a fixed standard. In London, the schoolboy set the world record of 7,139 points. Four years later at Helsinki, a strapping athlete of 6-foot-3 and 200 pounds, he did it again with 7,887 points.

"We started every day around 10 o'clock in the morning," Mathias recalled. "We rarely finished until around 11 p.m. I remember at London there were no lights for the infield and officials had to use flashlights to judge competition. It was weird. You could hear the whistle of the javelin and then the spear would disappear in the darkness."

Mathias recalled that in his first Olympics in 1948 he had done consistently well on the first day but needed a good performance in the high jump on the second day to remain in the running for the gold medal.

"The bar was put at 5 feet, 10 inches," he said. "I had missed twice. I feared that if I didn't make it on my last jump I might be virtually eliminated. Then from the stands I heard this big cheer, 'Come on, Tulare!' It was a group of people from back home. I got so inspired I made it."

Postal Service may stop odd shaped greeting cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Odd-shaped greeting cards could fade from the drug store counters, a victim of a plan to make the Postal Service more efficient.

The Postal Service announced on Wednesday it plans to restrict the size of envelopes, effective April 15, 1978. Envelopes smaller than the specifications will be banned and a surcharge, of an amount to be determined later, will be levied for any envelopes larger than the specifications. Specifications will be set later by the Postal Rate Commission.

Most envelopes now in use will meet the specifications, but greeting cards, which come in a wide variety of shapes and sizes, will be heavily affected, postal officials said.

The delay until April 15, 1978, is to allow all envelope manufacturers to conform to the specifications.

Envelopes can be sorted more efficiently by machine if they all conform to size specifications, a Postal Service spokesman said. He said the size rules are expected to save money for the financially ailing agency.

The envelope measure was one of a series of money-saving rules approved by the Postal Service's board of governors.

Another innovation is a discount, effective July 6, for large business mailers who sort their own first-class letters before mailing.

These mailers will pay 12 cents per letter, instead of the regular 13-cent rate. This is the first discount ever offered on first-class mail. To qualify, mailers of at least 500 first-class letters must bundle their mail according to the zip code of the destination.

Postal officials say they hope the discount will bring back some patrons who have begun delivering their own mail.

56 Signers — all Americans — all pioneers — all rebels in their day — all determined to free their fledging country from the tyranny of England's King and Parliament.

" - - - - - - we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." The closing words of the Declaration of Independence. How many of us would be so daring, so fool-hardy today?

So, in these Bicentennial Years, let's all break out the flag. Fly it high. Fly it proudly. Fly it to show our respect for the memory of those great 56 men who dared to defy one of the strongest powers on earth so that America might be born and grow into the greatest and most generous country in the world.

We offer at cost as a Bicentennial Public Service a complete home flag kit — a 3 x 5-foot double-stitched heavy cotton flag — a 6-foot jointed 2-piece staff with top ornament — a heavy mounting bracket with three screws — all in a sturdy 2-piece storage carton with full color flag history folder. Miss Mary Louise Brite left the first of the week for Emporia, Kas., for study in the summer school of the State Teachers' College.

Miss M. E. Martin will leave Monday for St. Louis. While there she will take a course in hair dressing. She expects to be gone two or three monts. Mrs. A. B. Proffer will take care of the shop during her absence.

Work on the building which the Gerhardt Construction Co., of Cape Girardeau is erecting for C.D.Matthews at the corner of Malone avenue and South Kingshighway, is rapidly progressing and should be finished in six weeks time. Sensenbaugh Bros. will occupy the building when it is completed.

Plans are being made at present for the remodeling of the front of the Malone Theatre at a near date. The tentative plans provide for a changing about of the front entrances and the box office. The box office will be changed from its present position at the side to a position in the front center with the entrances on either side. Where the box office now is, a ladies rest room, equipped with all conveniences, is to be placed.

What's the law?

The case of the apes

By JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

To make sure that no one made a monkey out of Adam, a statute was passed that made it a crime to teach that mankind ascended from a lower form of animal.

Consequently, not wishing to be tossed in the pokey as a lawbreaker, Mr. Milktoast, Daisy Mae's high school teacher, refused to give any instruction on evolution, even though it was part of the school curriculum.

Insisting that their daughter was being deprived of a full and complete scientific education, Daisy Mae's parents hurried off to court demanding that the antievolution statute be declared unconstitutional.

"When the jump was made from ape to human," they complained to a judge, "those old fogies that passed that law must have forgotten to jump. Obviously, their idea was to restrict scientific learning in favor of religious dogma."

"A state has the right to prescribe the curriculum in its pubilc schools," was the answer, "which includes excluding any theory deemed not to be in the public interest. And, in this state, we think the best thing to do about evolution is to try and live it down."

"IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you uphold the validity of the antievolution statute?

This is how the judge ruled: NO! The judge held that, while a state has the right to prescribe the curriculum for its public schools, it may not prohibit the teaching of a scientific theory or doctrine where the prohibition is based upon reasons that violate the provisions of the U.S. Constitution. In this case, concluded the judge, the purpose of the antievolution statute was to establish a religious doctrine in schools as to the origin of man which violates the freedom of religion mandate of the First Amendment.

Dear Charles and Allen,

Your coverage of the St. Louis Symphony Concert was outstanding and we of the Symphony Committee want you to know how very grateful we are to you and to your staff for all the effort and enthusiastic support that you gave to us —

We sold tickets to over 1500 people on a rainy night and we realize that our success depended very much on the many articles that you printed for us.

Thank you,

Film directors tells about stars in book

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Josh Logan has always been outspoken, whether talking about his bouts with mental illness or directing actors in plays and films. So it's no surprise that his memoirs prove frank and candid about the greats he has worked with.

"It was a terribly painful thing to do," said the director of his three-year ordeal in writing "Josh" (Delacorte, $10). "I didn't set out to be nasty to anyone, yet I had to be honest.

"I don't approve of books that are written for revenge. The most loathesome thing I have read recently is the first chapter of Truman Capote's 'Answered Prayers.' It's simply terrible how he has bitten the hands that fed him — people who invited him to dinner and to weekends in the country. And then to write so scatalogically about them."

Logan said he had feared the results of his honesty about certain personalities. For instance, Henry Fonda, whom he had directed in the play "Mister Roberts."

Fonda had escaped a film contract to play "Roberts," which Logan had written with Thomas Heggen, author of the novel. The director-star relationship remained fairly smooth until Fonda took the play on the road. Before the Los Angeles opening, Logan felt the show had deteriorated because the entire cast was trying to play Doug Roberts.

The director tried to restore the original spirit, Fonda rebelled, said he wouldn't appear in the movie if Logan directed, as had been promised. Logan withdrew.

"I thought I had been rough on Fonda in the book," the author remarked. "But he called me last night and said he thought the book was terrific."

He had directed several Rodgers and Hart musicals, as well as "Annie Get Your Gun," produced by Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein II. Logan and Leland Hayward bought the rights to "Tales of the South Pacific" and gave Rodgers and Hammerstein 51 per cent interest to write the show.

When Hammerstein bogged down in the writing, Logan collaborated and was allowed coauthorship credit. But not the author's royalties. Thus he was deprived of a lifelong royalty on the classic that he coauthored and staged.

He is convinced that Rodgers, who had become "a monument," had enforced the decision. In midrehearsal Logan was told to sign his contract within two hours or he would be fired.

"My name had been so minimized that I lived through years of having people praise 'South Pacific' in my presence without knowing I had had anything to do with it," he writes. The final ignominy came when his name was mistakenly left off the 1950 Pulitzer Prize for Drama.

Logan said Bennett Cerf had nagged him for years about writing his memoirs — "it was almost a relief when Bennett died." But then John Dodds of Putnam took up the campaign.

He admitted writing "Josh" had been a struggle: "Dialogue for plays is easy; it can be bad grammar and still be acceptable. Prose has to be the king's English."

Dr. Lamb

Moldy hay harms lungs

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I contracted farmer's lung by inhaling moldy hay, feeding our pet rabbits. I am going through a bad experience with coughing and spitting constantly. I am under a doctor's care — taking medications for the coughing spells and for my throat inflammation that I suffered. The doctor told me I have an allergy to moldy hay and this disease will take some time to go away. I am still spitting watery and foamy material more than five weeks after I inhaled this moldy hay.

Can you tell me more about this farmer's lung? Is there a possibility to get shots if this is an allergy? I hope you can help me with more information.

DEAR READER — Yes it is an allergy. It is caused by the spores of fungi. The spores are inhaled and when enough of them reach the tiny air sacs, the alveoli, in the lungs they sensitize the lung membrane. The next time you are exposed to more of the spores you have an allergic response of the lung tissues. They swell and are inflamed. Obviously they are not much good then for exchanging oxygen and carbon dioxide.

The inflammation results in formation of excess secretions that must be removed from the lungs, hence the coughing spells. The amount of sputum produced is usually limited.

The disease can lead to fibrosis and scarring of the lung tissues, causing permanent lung damage. If you have just one attack you usually recover completely with no important residual lung damage.

The fungi spores that cause similar illnesses are also in the filters of air conditioners. So this is a warning to my readers to be sure and change their air conditioner filters regularly and keep the system clean. Similar infections from fungi spores result in fungi from bird droppings, called bird-breeder's lung. There is a whole series of these called, maplebark-stripper's lung, mushroom worker's lung and in sugar cane workers, bagassosis.

The illness causes fever, chills, malaise, cough and sometimes chest pain and weight loss. The symptoms will come on the same day of exposure in the person who is already sensitized.

The chest X ray may be normal or show a patchy generalized distribution of the inflammation. There may be changes in the lung function tests associated with gas exchange for normal respiration.

You can get some relief from symptoms from the adrenocortical hormones such as cortisone and related medications. It is not definite though that these will prevent fibrosis and changes in the lung that can follow as a complication of the disease.

America looks at the increasing proportion of population over 65

The following is the first of three articles on America's growing elderly population. It looks at the social and economic ramifications of having an increasing proportion of the population over 65.

By ANN BLACKMAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Get ready for a shock, America: You're getting a little older every day. Soon you will need more hospital units for the eldery, more nurses trained to care for them.

You will be under pressure to change your Social Security and pension systems, to reconsider the way you force people to retire.

Your swelling population of old people will press you increasingly to create new jobs for them, both private enterprise and government programs that draw on the skills of retired professionals.

They will seek government programs to retrain them for new jobs and will be banging increasingly on the doors of your colleges and universities, even as the number of traditional college-age youth drops off.

These are no idle predictions. They are based on headcounts of people already born, plus predictions in present trends in births and deaths.

Today there are 1,600 more Americans over 65 than there were yesterday. Tomorrow the number will grow again, and by the year 2020 — when the post-World War II baby boom crop passes age 65 — there will be an estimated 43 million older Americans, almost twice as many as there are now.

About one in 10 Americans is over 65 today. But if young people continue their present taste for late marriage and small families, the year 2020 will see at least one in six Americans over 65.

And because women probably will continue to live longer than men, the 65 and older population of the future will be largely female, most of them widows.

Strains on the Social Security system are among the most pressing problems created by this "gray revolution."

Under the present system, benefits to retired people are paid from the payroll taxes of those presently in the work force. That means that today's young and middle-aged are putting money aside, not for their own retirement, but for those now retired.

Who will pay the retirement benefits of the baby boom generation?

Chances are it will still be the young and middle-aged, but it may cost them twice as much as it does now. The Social Security Administration estimates that in the year 2020, there will be 2.2 persons working for every one drawing retirement benefits. That compares to 3.2 workers for every beneficiary today.

Last year the administration estimated that by 2025, each worker may have to contribute 10.2 per cent of his salary to Social Security, compared to the 5.4 per cent he throws in today. Under present law, the employer contributes the some amount to the system.

Such a move is likely to be unpopular with the working force. But political pressure from pensioners, already strong, will increase as their numbers grow.

Olympics to Watergate Mathias goes home

NEW YORK (AP) — A couple of years ago, Robert Bruce Mathias of Tulare, Calif., was riding a star that appeared shooting for one of the brightest spots in the political heavens.

His credentials were staggeringly impressive:

A football hero at Stanford.

Consecutive Olympic gold medals in the decathlon, most demanding of all events, in 1948 and 1952 and hailed as the "world's No. 1 athlete."

Two and a half years in the Marine Corps.

Eight years a congressman from California, being groomed for the higher echelon of the Republican party.

Presidential timber? Perhaps. All the ingredients were there.

Then came Watergate.

"I was not personally involved," Mathias said. "But I was a Republican and I was from California. Naturally, I knew President Nixon but I did not campaign for him because I was busy campaigning for myself.

"It made no difference. Watergate created a tremendous apathy among Republicans as with all voters. Republicans didn't turn out to vote for anybody."

First, Mathias' district was restructured, making it 60 per cent Democratic, he said. Then the Watergate scandal exploded. After serving four terms, Mathias was beaten by Democrat John Krebs in his bid for re-election to Congress.

Mathias remained in Washington as a member of President Ford's re-election committee, his specific job being to organize the finance chairmen in the various states. This work done, Mathias is now prepared to return to his native California and enter private life.

"We are moving to Fresno," Mathias said from his home in Falls Church, Va., and referring to his wife, Melba, a college sweetheart, and three daughters, Romel, 21, a nurse; Megan, 18, and Marissa, 14.

"I have two camps, one for boys and another for girls, in California. About 800 kids. I intend to devote a lot of time to them. I probably will do some public relations. As for politics, I plan to play it cool. It all depends on whether there is a reapportionment of my district."

No U. S. Olympic athlete—perhaps with the exception of the great Jesse Owens—has received the adulation that was showered on Mathias after his back-to-back triumphs in the decathlon, an unprecedented feat.

Track historians hailed him as a greater all-around athlete than Jim Thorpe. He was named The Associated Press' "Male Athlete of the Year" in 1952.

Mathias was a 17-year-old high schooler when he went to London for the Olympic Games in 1948 to face the world's best all-around athletes, all older and more experienced.

The decathlon is the most gruelling of all Olympic events, consisting of four running events (the 100, 400 and 1,500 meters plus the 110-meter hurdles) and six field events (javelin, discus, shot put, pole vault, broad jump and high jump), covering two full days of competition. It is the Olympics' ultimate test of speed, strength and endurance.

The athlete is scored in relation to a fixed standard. In London, the schoolboy set the world record of 7,139 points. Four years later at Helsinki, a strapping athlete of 6-foot-3 and 200 pounds, he did it again with 7,887 points.

"We started every day around 10 o'clock in the morning," Mathias recalled. "We rarely finished until around 11 p.m. I remember at London there were no lights for the infield and officials had to use flashlights to judge competition. It was weird. You could hear the whistle of the javelin and then the spear would disappear in the darkness."

Mathias recalled that in his first Olympics in 1948 he had done consistently well on the first day but needed a good performance in the high jump on the second day to remain in the running for the gold medal.

"The bar was put at 5 feet, 10 inches," he said. "I had missed twice. I feared that if I didn't make it on my last jump I might be virtually eliminated. Then from the stands I heard this big cheer, 'Come on, Tulare!' It was a group of people from back home. I got so inspired I made it."

Postal Service may stop odd shaped greeting cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Odd-shaped greeting cards could fade from the drug store counters, a victim of a plan to make the Postal Service more efficient.

The Postal Service announced on Wednesday it plans to restrict the size of envelopes, effective April 15, 1978. Envelopes smaller than the specifications will be banned and a surcharge, of an amount to be determined later, will be levied for any envelopes larger than the specifications. Specifications will be set later by the Postal Rate Commission.

Most envelopes now in use will meet the specifications, but greeting cards, which come in a wide variety of shapes and sizes, will be heavily affected, postal officials said.

The delay until April 15, 1978, is to allow all envelope manufacturers to conform to the specifications.

Envelopes can be sorted more efficiently by machine if they all conform to size specifications, a Postal Service spokesman said. He said the size rules are expected to save money for the financially ailing agency.

The envelope measure was one of a series of money-saving rules approved by the Postal Service's board of governors.

Another innovation is a discount, effective July 6, for large business mailers who sort their own first-class letters before mailing.

These mailers will pay 12 cents per letter, instead of the regular 13-cent rate. This is the first discount ever offered on first-class mail. To qualify, mailers of at least 500 first-class letters must bundle their mail according to the zip code of the destination.

Postal officials say they hope the discount will bring back some patrons who have begun delivering their own mail.

56 Signers — all Americans — all pioneers — all rebels in their day — all determined to free their fledging country from the tyranny of England's King and Parliament.

" . . . . . . we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor." The closing words of the Declaration of Independence. How many of us would be so daring, so fool-hardy today?

So, in these Bicentennial Years, let's all break out the flag. Fly it high. Fly it proudly. Fly it to show our respect for the memory of those great 56 men who dared to defy one of the strongest powers on earth so that America might be born and grow into the greatest and most generous country in the world.

We offer at cost as a Bicentennial Public Service a complete home flag kit — a 3 x 5-foot double-stitched heavy cotton flag — a 6-foot jointed 2-piece staff with top ornament — a heavy mounting bracket with three screws — all in a sturdy 2-piece storage carton with full color flag history folder. SIU cuts off new freshman enrollment

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Southern Illinois University has cut off new freshman enrollment for the summer and fall semesters.

Frank E. Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, said today, "We cannot take any more students without taking on additional faculty members and we can't do that unless we are given additional resources."

B.K. Browning, director of admissions and records, said the school had by last Friday received 7,733 admissions applications for new freshman, about 1,100 ahead of the same time last year. Of those, 6,200 have been accepted and about 3,100 of those are expected to enroll.

That would put SIU at a projected total enrollment this fall of 21,700, the most the university believes it can handle. In the fall of 1975 some 21,214 students enrolled.

Getty dies-fortune to charity

GUILDFORD, England (AP) — Oil billionaire J. Paul Getty, dead at the age of 83, is to be buried in California, the state he called home but had not seen for two decades.

Members of Getty's staff said the body would be flown to the United States some time this week. There was no indication what funeral arangements were planned.

Getty, the president and principal stockholder of the Getty Oil Co. and one of the world's richest men, died Sunday of a heart attack at Sutton Place, the 16th century, 72-room manor house 30 miles southwest of London that had been his home since 1959.

His health had weakened during the winter, and he went into a coma Saturday night. "His death was very quiet.... There were no last words," his secretary, Norris Bramlett, reported. One of his tree sons, Gordon Peter Getty, had flown from the United States to be at his side.

Getty's fortune was estimated at between $2 billion and $4 billion. Bramlett said his will made provision for his survivors, who include 16 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, but the bulk of the fortune was left to charity.

Bramlett said the will would be filed in California this week.

He also reported that Harold E. Berg, the vice president and chief executive office of the Getty Oil Co., would act as head of the company until the board of directors elects a successor to Getty.

Getty was the son of an Oklahoma oilman-lawyer who disinherited Jean Paul because he divorced his wife. But young Getty put together a substantial stake as an oil prospector in Tulsa and made his first million at 23 with an Oklahoma gusher.

He once told a reporter he was a "moderate-sized fellow compared to Exxon, Royal Dutch Shell, Texaco, Gulf, Standard of California." But the ownership of those giants is spread over many stockholders, while Getty owned about two-thirds of Getty Oil's 20 million shares. At today's prices, his stock is worth about $2 billion, and he had extensive other holdings.

Getty was married five times, to women whose ages ranged from 17 to 21. All of the marriages ended in divorce, the last in 1958. For several years recently he was attentive to Margaret Duchess of Argyll, and his 43-year-old hostess at Sutton Place, Rosabella Burch, told a magazine interviewer recently that she wanted to marry him. But Getty once told a reporter: "When you have crash-landed five times, you give up flying."

Bond announces a new program to improve rescue operations

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has announced that the State of Missouri will conduct a new program to improve emergency rescue operations in traffic accidents where victims are trapped in their vehicles.

Bond said the state Division of Highway Safety, Department of Public Safety, will provide funds for training and federally approved equipment to be used in the highly specialized rescue operations.

"This new program will help our emergency service personnel save lives and prevent tragic injuries by giving them better training and tools for dealing with accidents in which victims are trapped in their vehicles," the governor said.

"The firefighters, emergency medical technicians, rescue squad personnel and law enforcement officers who will be receiving the training are called upon a daily basis to perform this type of rescue operation, and it does require specialized training and equipment. These outstanding public servants deserve all the help we can give them.

"I understand that many of them have requested this specialized training, and I am gratified that we will be able to provide it to them on a statewide basis."

Along with the Division of Highway Safety, the University of Missouri Extension Division will conduct the program in cooperation with the Bureau of Emergency Medical Services of the Division of Health, Department of Social Services and the state fire marshal.

The program will begin with a series of statewide seminars to be conducted throughout Missouri by Bill Westhoff Jr., coordinator of fire services training at the University of Missouri. Times and places for the seminars will be announced later, but Westhoff said they will be held both on weekends and weekdays to insure maximum opportunity for participation.

The training will include both classroom and field experience and will involve actual training in use of the rescue equipment.

The Division of Highway Safety also will provide, through the EMS Bureau, funds to purchase equipment for those departments and agencies which have had a sufficient number of people completing the training course.

More information on the program may be obtained from the University of Missouri Fire Training Office, 1001 Ashland gravel Road, Columbia, Mo. 65201. The phone number is 882-4735.

The Prayer

"Do not call any man on earth 'father'; for you have one Father, and he is in heaven." (Matthew 23:9, NEB)

PRAYER: Holy Spirit, impress upon us the truth that we are God's adopted children, chosen by love and called to help others to discover the truth about You, about themselves, and about other people and the world. Amen.

Executive Dish

Calvin Coolidge, who invited members of Congress to breakfast meetings at the White House, startled his guests one morning by pouring coffee and cream into his saucer. In confusion, several others at the table did the same. Without a word, the President placed his saucer on the floor for his dog.

Studies show citizens safer in rural areas during nuclear attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon studies show that millions of Americans could be moved from U.S. cities to safer rural areas and small towns in face of threatened nuclear missile attacks, officials say.

But these studies, still under way, have not yet produced solutions for potentially gigantic problems of how to feed, shelter, provide medical attention and otherwise care for the hordes of uprooted city folk.

"The cost of preparing for temporary relocation of city populations in a war threat crisis would be staggering, we admit," said one official of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency. "We don't yet know how much it would cost."

At the moment, the civil defense agency is budgeted for $71 million in the coming year, one of its lowest budgets in an up-and-down history.

Studies begun six years ago have identified 400 U.S. "high risk" areas, including military bases and urban-industrial complexes with populations of 50,000 or more. Experts estimate about 137 million Americans live in these prime target areas.

The concept of "crisis relocation" is based on a belief that there would be at least several days of rising tension preceding a possible nuclear attack, and that populations could be moved out of high risk areas in an orderly manner during that time. Among other things, U.S. officials would direct evacuation of American cities if U.S. spy satellites detected the movement of populations from Russian cities.

U.S. city dwellers would be distributed by train, bus and automobile among relatively sparsely populated "host areas" which officials feel would not be targets of Soviet missiles. In some cases, Americans might be sent 100 or more miles from their homes.

A special civil defense agency study focuses on the intensely populated Northeast urban corridor stretching from Boston to Washington and including New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities.

The agency estimated, on the basis of the 1970 census, that as many as 47 million people might have to be relocated from Northeast cities in an impending nuclear war situation. Officials say results of the Northeast study, begun 11 months ago, may apply to other thickly populated regions such as the Chicago-Detroit corridor and California.

At least one congressional group backs the idea of gearing up for possible evacuation of big U.S. cities, even if it is a costly process.

"The capability to remove populations is important in deterring an attack as well as in reducing casualties if deterrence fails," said a House armed services subcommittee in a recent report.

Some other congressmen, however, oppose a major U.S. civil defense effort on grounds it would make nuclear war "thinkable." They argue that such a U.S. effort might be read by the Russians as a sign that the United States was preparing for nuclear aggression, and that this might heighten the chances that the Russians might consider a pre-emptive strike.

Hays gives indication he may step down from post

NEW ALEXANDRIA, Ohio (AP) — Embattled Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, has given the first indication he may temporarily step aside as chairman of the House Administration Committee.

"I'm going to meet with the committee and talk it over with them," Hays told reporters Sunday while in this eastern Ohio community for a bicentennial program. "Some think it is a gesture I ought to make and I'll come back.... "

Hays' comment came amid reports from Washington that the administration committee will meet in mid-week and that Hays would temporarily step down as chairman until investigations are completed on a sex-payroll scandal. He has already stepped aside temporarily as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

At the same time Hays lashed out at Rep. Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass, who said Saturday that Hays "will either give up the House Administration Committee chairmanship or be removed from it."

Said Hays: "I am not going to a Democratic caucus because at the moment Mr. O'Neill is bitterly my enemy. He tried to destroy me two years ago and I'm not going to put myself in his hands. I'm going to put myself in the committee's hands."

He did not elaborate, nor did he refer to the committee chairmanship while addressing the 400-500 persons who gave him a standing ovation when he was introduced in the auditorium of the New Alexandria elementary school.

Hays' troubles stem from his admitted personal relationship with Elizabeth Ray and allegations he put her in a $14,000-a-year staff job as his mistress. Those allegations are being investigated by the House and the Justice Department.

O'Neill, House majority leader, is in line to succeed House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okia., who announced Saturday he will retire at the end of this term.

In a Saturday appearance at nearby Smithfield, Hays said of O'Neill: "I've pushed around some big people in my time and one of them is the so-called majority leader who led the fight to bar me from being chairman last fall because he wants all the power in his hands. But I'm not going to give up."

60 troops are expected to attend BSA camp

SILVA — More than 60 scout troops from this area will attend Camp Lewallen this summer as part of a year- round camping program in the Southeast Missouri Council of Boy Scouts of America.

According to Joe Kiser, each troop is taking part in its weeklong camping experience, in which scouts will have an opportunity to practice many of the educational activities that are a part of the total scounting program.

The camping chairman said that one of the most important strengths of scouting is the patrol method, which gives boys an opportunity to learn how to get along with others by actually running their troop through the troop leaders' council.

He also pointed out that the traditional boy- man relationship provides the opportunity for the scoutmaster to be a coach and counselor and that scouting ideals are used as a personal challenge to boys while they are in camp and also when they are at home.

Kiser also cited "the adventure of scouting," which introduces boys to the world around them and helps them to find their place in it. "Boys want to do things on their own while recognizing that adults are needed to guid them as they learn new skills, and they also now have the opportunity to make more decisions," he said.

The first week's program at Camp Lewallen is developed for junior leader training. Scouts who serve as senior patrol leaders, patrol leaders and other troop officers participate in a leadership development course.

The final week of the camp program is developed for the 10-year-old Webelos Scouts. Two three- day programs are planned for the young campers.

More than 850 boys will spend a week at Camp Lewallen this summer. For scouts who are unable to attend when their troop goes to camp, a special provisional troop is planned for this summer. Leadership will be provided by the SeMo Council. Dan Odell, district executive for the Shawnee District, will serve as camp director.

SIU cuts off new freshman enrollment

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP) — Southern Illinois University has cut off new freshman enrollment for the summer and fall semesters.

Frank E. Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, said today, "We cannot take any more students without taking on additional faculty members and we can't do that unless we are given additional resources."

B.K. Browning, director of admissions and records, said the school had by last Friday received 7,733 admissions applications for new freshman, about 1,100 ahead of the same time last year. Of those, 6,200 have been accepted and about 3,100 of those are expected to enroll.

That would put SIU at a projected total enrollment this fall of 21,700, the most the university believes it can handle. In the fall of 1975 some 21,214 students enrolled.

Getty dies-fortune to charity

GUILDFORD, England (AP) — Oil billionaire J. Paul Getty, dead at the age of 83, is to be buried in California, the state he called home but had not seen for two decades.

Members of Getty's staff said the body would be flown to the United States some time this week. There was no indication what funeral arangements were planned.

Getty, the president and principal stockholder of the Getty Oil Co. and one of the world's richest men, died Sunday of a heart attack at Sutton Place, the 16th century, 72-room manor house 30 miles southwest of London that had been his home since 1959.

His health had weakened during the winter, and he went into a coma Saturday night. "His death was very quiet.... There were no last words," his secretary, Norris Bramlett, reported. One of his tree sons, Gordon Peter Getty, had flown from the United States to be at his side.

Getty's fortune was estimated at between $2 billion and $4 billion. Bramlett said his will made provision for his survivors, who include 16 grandchildren and one great-grandchild, but the bulk of the fortune was left to charity.

Bramlett said the will would be filed in California this week.

He also reported that Harold E. Berg, the vice president and chief executive office of the Getty Oil Co., would act as head of the company until the board of directors elects a successor to Getty.

Getty was the son of an Oklahoma oilman-lawyer who disinherited Jean Paul because he divorced his wife. But young Getty put together a substantial stake as an oil prospector in Tulsa and made his first million at 23 with an Oklahoma gusher.

He once told a reporter he was a "moderate-sized fellow compared to Exxon, Royal Dutch Shell, Texaco, Gulf, Standard of California." But the ownership of those giants is spread over many stockholders, while Getty owned about two-thirds of Getty Oil's 20 million shares. At today's prices, his stock is worth about $2 billion, and he had extensive other holdings.

Getty was married five times, to women whose ages ranged from 17 to 21. All of the marriages ended in divorce, the last in 1958. For several years recently he was attentive to Margaret Duchess of Argyll, and his 43-year-old hostess at Sutton Place, Rosabella Burch, told a magazine interviewer recently that she wanted to marry him. But Getty once told a reporter: "When you have crash-landed five times, you give up flying."

Bond announces a new program to improve rescue operations

JEFFERSON CITY — Gov. Christopher S. Bond has announced that the State of Missouri will conduct a new program to improve emergency rescue operations in traffic accidents where victims are trapped in their vehicles.

Bond said the state Division of Highway Safety, Department of Public Safety, will provide funds for training and federally approved equipment to be used in the highly specialized rescue operations.

"This new program will help our emergency service personnel save lives and prevent tragic injuries by giving them better training and tools for dealing with accidents in which victims are trapped in their vehicles," the governor said.

"The firefighters, emergency medical technicians, rescue squad personnel and law enforcement officers who will be receiving the training are called upon a daily basis to perform this type of rescue operation, and it does require specialized training and equipment. These outstanding public servants deserve all the help we can give them.

"I understand that many of them have requested this specialized training, and I am gratified that we will be able to provide it to them on a statewide basis."

Along with the Division of Highway Safety, the University of Missouri Extension Division will conduct the program in cooperation with the Bureau of Emergency Medical Services of the Division of Health, Department of Social Services and the state fire marshal.

The program will begin with a series of statewide seminars to be conducted throughout Missouri by Bill Westhoff Jr., coordinator of fire services training at the University of Missouri. Times and places for the seminars will be announced later, but Westhoff said they will be held both on weekends and weekdays to insure maximum opportunity for participation.

The training will include both classroom and field experience and will involve actual training in use of the rescue equipment.

The Division of Highway Safety also will provide, through the EMS Bureau, funds to purchase equipment for those departments and agencies which have had a sufficient number of people completing the training course.

More information on the program may be obtained from the University of Missouri Fire Training Office, 1001 Ashland gravel Road, Columbia, Mo. 65201. The phone number is 882-4735.

The Prayer

"Do not call any man on earth 'father'; for you have one Father, and he is in heaven." (Matthew 23:9, NEB)

PRAYER: Holy Spirit, impress upon us the truth that we are God's adopted children, chosen by love and called to help others to discover the truth about You, about themselves, and about other people and the world. Amen.

Executive Dish

Calvin Coolidge, who invited members of Congress to breakfast meetings at the White House, startled his guests one morning by pouring coffee and cream into his saucer. In confusion, several others at the table did the same. Without a word, the President placed his saucer on the floor for his dog.

Studies show citizens safer in rural areas during nuclear attacks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon studies show that millions of Americans could be moved from U.S. cities to safer rural areas and small towns in face of threatened nuclear missile attacks, officials say.

But these studies, still under way, have not yet produced solutions for potentially gigantic problems of how to feed, shelter, provide medical attention and otherwise care for the hordes of uprooted city folk.

"The cost of preparing for temporary relocation of city populations in a war threat crisis would be staggering, we admit," said one official of the Defense Civil Preparedness Agency. "We don't yet know how much it would cost."

At the moment, the civil defense agency is budgeted for $71 million in the coming year, one of its lowest budgets in an up-and-down history.

Studies begun six years ago have identified 400 U.S. "high risk" areas, including military bases and urban-industrial complexes with populations of 50,000 or more. Experts estimate about 137 million Americans live in these prime target areas.

The concept of "crisis relocation" is based on a belief that there would be at least several days of rising tension preceding a possible nuclear attack, and that populations could be moved out of high risk areas in an orderly manner during that time. Among other things, U.S. officials would direct evacuation of American cities if U.S. spy satellites detected the movement of populations from Russian cities.

U.S. city dwellers would be distributed by train, bus and automobile among relatively sparsely populated "host areas" which officials feel would not be targets of Soviet missiles. In some cases, Americans might be sent 100 or more miles from their homes.

A special civil defense agency study focuses on the intensely populated Northeast urban corridor stretching from Boston to Washington and including New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities.

The agency estimated, on the basis of the 1970 census, that as many as 47 million people might have to be relocated from Northeast cities in an impending nuclear war situation. Officials say results of the Northeast study, begun 11 months ago, may apply to other thickly populated regions such as the Chicago-Detroit corridor and California.

At least one congressional group backs the idea of gearing up for possible evacuation of big U.S. cities, even if it is a costly process.

"The capability to remove populations is important in deterring an attack as well as in reducing casualties if deterrence fails," said a House armed services subcommittee in a recent report.

Some other congressmen, however, oppose a major U.S. civil defense effort on grounds it would make nuclear war "thinkable." They argue that such a U.S. effort might be read by the Russians as a sign that the United States was preparing for nuclear aggression, and that this might heighten the chances that the Russians might consider a pre-emptive strike.

Hays gives indication he may step down from post

NEW ALEXANDRIA, Ohio (AP) — Embattled Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, has given the first indication he may temporarily step aside as chairman of the House Administration Committee.

"I'm going to meet with the committee and talk it over with them," Hays told reporters Sunday while in this eastern Ohio community for a bicentennial program. "Some think it is a gesture I ought to make and I'll come back.... "

Hays' comment came amid reports from Washington that the administration committee will meet in mid-week and that Hays would temporarily step down as chairman until investigations are completed on a sex-payroll scandal. He has already stepped aside temporarily as chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

At the same time Hays lashed out at Rep. Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, D-Mass, who said Saturday that Hays "will either give up the House Administration Committee chairmanship or be removed from it."

Said Hays: "I am not going to a Democratic caucus because at the moment Mr. O'Neill is bitterly my enemy. He tried to destroy me two years ago and I'm not going to put myself in his hands. I'm going to put myself in the committee's hands."

He did not elaborate, nor did he refer to the committee chairmanship while addressing the 400-500 persons who gave him a standing ovation when he was introduced in the auditorium of the New Alexandria elementary school.

Hays' troubles stem from his admitted personal relationship with Elizabeth Ray and allegations he put her in a $14,000-a-year staff job as his mistress. Those allegations are being investigated by the House and the Justice Department.

O'Neill, House majority leader, is in line to succeed House Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., who announced Saturday he will retire at the end of this term.

In a Saturday appearance at nearby Smithfield, Hays said of O'Neill: "I've pushed around some big people in my time and one of them is the so-called majority leader who led the fight to bar me from being chairman last fall because he wants all the power in his hands. But I'm not going to give up."
